Toronto listing a break for BCRIC

Shares in the British Columbia Resources Investment Corp. (BCRIC) will be listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange sometime next week — a breakthrough that could boost the value of the shares sooner than expected.

Trading in shares of the former provincial Crown corporation will begin Tuesday on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Corporation president David Helliwell said Friday the company will be listed on the Toronto exchange by Wednesday or Thursday.

The move to put BCRIC on the board at Toronto has been in the works for about a month, but the final decision was made Thursday when the exchange and Ontario Securities Commission agreed to waive some of the rules that normally must be met before a stock can be listed.

For example, the company has been allowed to issue its annual reports in the form of newspaer advertisements rather than follow the normal procedure of mailing out reports.

Helliwell said he doubts the Toronto listing would see an immediate rise in the value of corporation shares, but that the wider market exposure would attract more investors from outside B.C., making the price rise more quickly than it might ordinarily.

Almost all of BCRIC's two million shareholders are B.C. residents who picked up five free shares when Premier Bill Bennett decided to dismantle the Crown-owned investment company set up by the previous New Democratic Party government.

Eligible residents of the province also had the option of buying up to 5,000 shares at a set price of $6 a share. The giveaway and sale program resulted in one of the largest stock subscriptions in Canadian financial history — 96,250,000 shares were issued and the company raised $487 million.

Helliwell said the move to list BCRIC at Toronto was in the best interests of shareholders by stabilizing the value of shares.

"It would be a pity if a technical imbalance of buyers and sellers drives the stock below what it was actually worth," he said.

Vancouver-based stockbrokers, however, are less than enchanted with the move.

"This is taking business away from B.C. people by putting it in Toronto," complained Bob Fay of Continental Carlisle Douglas Ltd., who estimated that 90 per cent of the dealing in BCRIC shares will eventually shift east.

"In this case I think that switch will be very quick."

BCRIC trading will be watched intently by a somewhat skeptical investment community, bankers and provincial government ministers.

Another interested observer will be the federal Progressive Conservative government which has advocated returning some Crown corporations to the private sector.

Few, however, are likely to be watching more closely than the corporation's two million shareholders — many of them first-time investors.

But if the price of BCRIC shares goes down, as inevitably it will at some point, don't panic, says Vancouver Stock Exchange president Robert Scott.

"The shares have nowhere to go but up," he said in an interview.

"I hope people will realize that all shares go up and down and they won't panic if the price falls on Tuesday."

READY, AIM . . . CRUTCH? Chuck Davis, a 14-year-old cadet in the 2290 B.C. Regiment hams it up at Heal's Range in the B.C. Rifle Association's annual competition. He cracked an ankle last week, but doesn't expect it to handicap him with a real rifle competing against fellow-cadet Todd Larry, 15, or Andy Klor, 15, from Surrey. Gulf seeking picket curbs

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Gulf Oil Canada has applied for a court injunction to restrict picketing and stop harassment by striking workers who allegedly attacked delivery trucks driven by supervisory personnel trying to leave the firm's distribution centre.

Gulf spokesman Roy Carson said Friday a B.C. Supreme court judge was expected to decide today whether to issue an injunction restricting the number of union members allowed to picket the Burnaby centre to a "reasonable number" and order a stop to "any harassment or violence which threatens the safety of our employees."

Carson said the individuals threw rocks at four trucks Friday morning, breaking windows. They also spiked tires and tampered with brake and air hoses, he said.

"You name it, they did it," said Carson.

Bill Lewis, a business agent for the Teamsters, denied that union members were responsible for the attack.

"It wasn't us that did it and we're not going to be blamed for it.

The Teamsters union struck Gulf Oil's Port Moody refinery and major distribution plants throughout British Columbia Tuesday, and expanded their strike Thursday to include Chevron and Imperial.

A run of deliveries by oil company supervisors rescued service stations running short of gasoline.

A score of gas stations, mainly in the greater Vancouver area, were forced to shut Thursday and Friday after supplies ran dry because of a strike by delivery drivers at three major oil companies. Stations elsewhere in the province were in better shape, but many had doubted they would make it through the weekend unless more gasoline came through.

Spokesmen for Gulf Canada Ltd., Imperial Oil Ltd. and Chevron Ltd. said a run of deliveries went smoothly Friday night. Some stations may be short of certain types of gas, but there should be enough to go around unless panic buying begins, they said.

B.C. Ferries Corp., which warned that its service to Vancouver Island might have to be curtailed if diesel oil deliveries were halted by the drivers' strike, reported that all ferries were making their usual runs today and no problems were expected during the weekend beyond the usual crush of holiday traffic.

A spokesman for the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers union has said however that union members won't cross a Teamster's picket line.

Teamsters' spokesman Bill Lewis has said the union will "picket wherever we're legally entitled to picket."

Air crash in India

NEW DELHI (AP) — An Indian Airlines plane with 51 persons aboard crashed today near Bombay, United News of India reported. There was no word on casualties.

The news agency said the plane, on a flight to Bombay from Poon, went down near the village of Kiroli, about 50 kilometres from Bombay in southwest India.

Other details were not available.

Lusaka summit goes into private

LUSAKA (UPC) — The constant wail of police sirens has ceased on the streets of Lusaka for this weekend for the first time since the Commonwealth conference began while the leaders of 39 delegations take a break from their comings and goings.

The leaders hope to emerge Monday from their two-day sojourn for informal talks at State House, the home of Zambian president Kenneth Kaunda, with the main elements of the final communique to be issued Wednesday already hammered out.

Meanwhile they relax in an atmosphere of swimming, golfing and horseback riding safely removed from the pressures of newsmen and advisors.

Among the Canadian delegation, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald has flown for a sightseeing trip to Victoria Falls on the Zambia-Rhodesia border, one of the great beauty spots of the African continent.

The leaders went into seclusion today with high hopes of finding a middle of the road program for genuine majority rule in Rhodesia following accommodations on both sides at formal sessions Friday.

Tanzanian president Julius Nyerere, spokesman for the five black-ruled states that border racially-troubled southern Africa, has said he has no objections to constitutional guarantees of parliamentary seats for Rhodesia's white minority. He agreed the Patriotic Front should halt its guerrilla war against the Muzorewa-Smith government in exchange for internationally-supervised elections.

British prime minister Margaret Thatcher, for her part, has agreed that elements of the new Rhodesian constitution drawn up by the former white Smith government are unjust and promised to honor commitments to provide for full black majority rule.

The relaxed hopeful atmosphere that marked the end of the week's talks was a far cry from the hostility and tension in which the conference opened. From the moment Mrs. Thatcher arrived in Lusaka to be mobbed by angry Zambian reporters, it was clear the black nations were outraged at suggestions Britain might lift economic sanctions against Rhodesia when they come up for renewal in parliament this November.

Mrs. Thatcher has softened her position since arriving in Lusaka, and much of the credit is being given to Australian prime minister Malcolm Fraser, who has aligned himself closely with the Third World position and reportedly urged Mrs. Thatcher to ease her stand.

Volcano threatens village

CATANIA, Sicily (UPI) — The Mount Etna volcano unleashed its awesome power in a major eruption today, covering eastern Sicily with a mantle of black ash and threatening a village on its slopes with a massive flow of molten lava.

The eruption, Etna's first in 17 months and its most spectacular in decades, showered ash, cinders and rocks over the eastern coastal city of Catania for the first time in 20 years.

Glowing red lava gushed from one of three craters down the rocky sides of the 10,707-foot high volcano and moved to within a mile of the village of Milo on the mountain's southeast slopes.

The village mayor immediately asked Milo's 2,000 residents to be ready for possible evacuation.

Etna eruptions have killed an estimated 1 million people during the volcano's 2,400 years of recorded history, but only one person has been reported killed by eruptions this century.

Catania's Fontanarossa airport was closed to traffic because the falling ash made its runways too slippery for landings and threatened to damage jet engines.

Residents of the city and nearby towns along the eastern coast donned heavy coats and carried open umbrellas to ward off the falling soot and cinders which covered the streets and blackened the beaches.

Tens of thousands of tourists stayed up through the night to watch the display.

Sounds like a cool idea for the heat

By CLAUDE ADAMS
FP News Service

WASHINGTON — Americans trying to take the sweat out of the energy crisis are shedding ties at work, buying sandals and installing those romantic Casablanca-type overhead fans that kept Bogey cool in the Moroccan heat.

There is life after air-conditioning, many are discovering. And a federal law prohibiting thermostat settings below 78 degrees F doesn't have to mean the end of comfort.

For the whimsical, a New York firm, Syntonic Research Inc., has developed an idea based on the premise that heat and humidity may be a state of mind.

For $7.98, Syntonic will sell you recordings of a "country thunderstorm" and an "alpine blizzard" that are designed to put a little chill in your life while the mercury is rising. The blizzard record, for example, features the slapping sound of sleet, winds rising and falling, and shutters banging.

The body may still sweat, but the mind is off somewhere in the Alps with Heidi.

The company's president, Irv Teibel, says the fake weather worked for a group of soldiers in Arizona, who switched off the humidifiers in their barracks and put on some 33 1/3-rpm rain and snow, and enjoyed their first good sleep in memory.

Stereophonic climate won't solve the energy crisis alone, but it might help. Air conditioners gobble up between 1,000 and 3,000 watts, while stereos set on low volume consume as little as five watts.

Even if it doesn't work, a recording of a gale-force wind is at least as good as most Muzak.

Fish shutdown?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A shutdown in the British Columbia fishing industry appears to hang on voting today by 4,000 shore workers.

Six hundred tendermen, also represented by the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, were also voting Friday and today.

Union president Jack Nichol said it was less likely that the shoreworkers would accept the latest industry offer.

'Mafia' tribe Papua's hit men

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — Sociologists are fascinated by a comparatively primitive tribe in New Guinea with a crime organization somewhat resembling the Mafia.

The tribe is the Goilala which has transferred its aptitude for murder from the harsh mountains of newly independent Papua New Guinea, off the northeast coast of Australia, to the capital, Port Moresby.

The Goilalas have become so important a factor in Port Moresby crime that they virtually support their tribal economy in the mountains with planeloads of city loot.

Lack of education prevents the Goilalas from corrupting the police and taking over businesses. "Both may, however, simply be matters of time," said a report in the magazine, New Society.

The Goilalas are an inbred group notorious for their implacability. When the first white patrols entered New Guinea's mountains at the turn of the century, the Goilalas met them with a shower of arrows and spears. The Goilalas kept fighting until the late 1930s, many years after other tribes had accepted colonial authority.

According to New Society, the Goilalas, a striking people with dark, brooding, big-boned faces, always exacted an eye for an eye in tribal disputes and killed for pleasure.

A Goilala male proved his manhood by killing "in the same way that a young Mafia recruit must make his bones before taking a senior position in the family."

"Even today there are recorded instances of young Goilalas queuing by a freshly killed body and taking turns to hack at it with an axe," New Society said.

Patrol officers broke the murder spiral in the tribal homelands in the 1950s using the Goilalas' own weapons — torture, arson, assault, destruction of homes and gardens and abuse of womenfolk.

The first Goilalas to reach Port Moresby in the 1950s discovered that murder in the back streets was easier than in the open highlands, where the patrols could ex-

Ferry workers end walkout

VANCOUVER (CP) — Highways ministry ferries were back in operation Friday after ferry workers ended an illegal walkout they had started earlier in the day.

Their return to work ended the threat of a protracted labor dispute that might have fouled up holiday weekend traffic.

As traffic sorted itself out on those minor runs, cars were lining up for the major runs, operated by the British Columbia Ferry Corp., between Vancouver Island and the mainland.

Early Friday evening, some drivers were waiting at Horseshoe Bay for up to five hours for passage to Nanaimo on Vancouver Island.

The walkout earlier in the day, however, affected only some of the ferries operated by the B.C. highways ministry.

The ministry applied to the B.C. Labor Relations Board for a cease-and-desist order but union leaders persuaded workers to return to work before the ruling was made.

The workers, members of the B.C. Government Employees Union, walked out to protest the government's practice of hiring only temporary workers. The union and the government now are in the midst of negotiations for a new contract.

The short-lived strike idled ferries operated by the ministry between Comox on Vancouver Island and Powell River on the mainland, between Nanaimo and Gabriola Island and on several other Gulf Island runs.

Fleet superintendent Ted Blanchard said the strike was illegal because it occurred while contract negotiations with the province were in progress.

Cliff Andstein, director of collective bargaining for the union, said the ministry ferry system employs 600 workers, 272 of which are classified as casual auxiliary employees.

The auxiliary workers want the same benefits, including seniority, retirement benefits and medical plans, as those given to permanent employees.

More than half of the 272 casuals have been working steadily for more than a year, he said, and as many as 75 have been steadily employed for up to six years.

Primitive tribe used as hit men

tort the name of a suspect. About half of the tribe's 30,000 members now live in squatter camps or re-settlement buildings in the capital.

For a people only recently out of the stone age, the Goilalas' adaptation to modern urban crime is remarkable, New Society said. Their crime overlords, called "Kukamara chiefs," present ritual Kukamara tobacco to hit men who can neither refuse to smoke it nor to carry out the murder or crime assigned to them.

The Goilalas once monopolized jobs on refuse collection carts, which enabled them to sift for useable castoffs from European houses and to note which houses were empty. Another tribe, the Chimbus, tried to take over these jobs and the resultant battle, from the late 1960s to the early 1970s, was "longer, more bitter and more bloody than any Chicago gang fight," New Society said.

More than 100 bodies were found in Port Moresby alone.

The magazine said that because there is no liaison between city and mountain police, planeloads of city plunder such as cutlery, crockery, battery-operated radios, tape-recorders, clothing and carpets, are offloaded at mountain airstrips in Goilala country.

It added: "The position of the Goilala in Port Moresby today is like that of an embryonic Mafia. As yet they lack the political awareness and economic sophistication of the Mafia but there are undoubtedly many parallels."

AirCan fare cut protest

MONTREAL (CP) — American Airlines has filed a protest with the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) in Washington against Air Canada's fall seat sale, Air Canada said Friday.

The protest, contained in a telegram to the board from American Airlines vice-president William D. Stewart Jr., asks the CAB to refuse Air Canada permission to offer its discount prices on U.S. routes "until American's Super Saver and discount coupon fares are accepted by the Canadian government."

The U.S. airline contends the Air Canada discounts are unfair competition because the Canadian transport commission won't approve the special discounts being offered by American Airlines and some of its U.S. carriers for travel to this country.

The Air Canada fall sale, a follow-up to the highly-successful spring sale, slashes regular prices from 46 to 66 per cent on flights of 1,000 miles or more for travel in Canada between Sept. 24 and Nov. 4, and for United States destinations from Oct. 5 to Nov. 23.

Air Canada and American are competitors on four routes involved in the fall seat sale — Montreal-Los Angeles, Montreal-San Francisco, Toronto-Los Angeles and Toronto-San Francisco.

Until the board acts on the American Airline's protest, "it's business as usual for the seat sale," Air Canada spokesman Barrie Wall said. Agents will continue to sell the discount tickets to U.S. destinations.

Both American and CP Air, Air Canada's major competitor in Canada, matched the Crown-owned carrier's discounts during the spring sale. CP Air isn't following suit this time, but will expand its Skybus, no-frills service to Winnipeg and Montreal.

Breakthrough for BCRIC

The shares, which are being distributed to all British Columbians who have applied for them, can be picked up on Tuesday, the same day trading in them begins on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Scott said preliminary indications are that buy orders will match sell orders and the market will be orderly.

"But if the price falls, as it might, just hang on to the shares until the price rises," he said.

"The shares of BCRIC are not yet a blue chip stock but they soon will be. The stock is not like some penny mine that might become worthless at any time. The shares have nowhere to go but up — in the long term."

GETTING THE SHARES: On Tuesday the shares can be obtained from the bank, trust company, credit union or other financial house where the application was made.

Take your official receipt.

If you've lost it, bring two pieces of identification. There may be a delay while the financial house checks your signature against your signature on the your application form.

Once you have your shares, you can sell them to anyone. They are bearer's certificates, which means that if you lose them whoever finds them can sell them for cash.

SELLING THE SHARES: They can be sold on the Vancouver Stock Exchange (VSE), starting 7 a.m. Tuesday.

But they also can be sold to anyone. The best place may be at a brokerage house in Victoria.

Any brokerage house will put them through the VSE where there will be a commission charge of three per cent and a five-day delay while the deal is being completed.

But the VSE has made arrangements where sellers can get instant cash.

So most brokerage houses in Victoria, starting Tuesday, will pay full market value, minus 25 cents a share, and give you instant cash.

This is a fair charge because the broker is taking a risk. The value of the shares may decline before he can sell them on the exchange.

There is a three per cent charge if your broker sells through the exchange (instead of buying them from you) and the charge is 90 cents when the stock price is $6. If the stock goes to $8 the commission goes to $1.20, which is three per cent of $40 (five times $8). And the seller must wait the full five trading days before the money is received.

However, as the brokerage houses have made arrangements to buy the shares instantly at market minus 25 cents, their charge charge will be a fixed $1.25, no matter what the shares are selling at.

And as anyone can sell the five shares at market minus $1.25 at any time, this becomes the fair over-the-fence or beer-parlor value of the shares.

Market value will be announced on radio stations every hour for the first week of trading. Newspapers will also carry the latest quotes on the shares.

Normally, there is a minimum charge of $15 for selling a block of shares but this requirement has been waived for the BCRIC shares.

In addition, the normal minimum for a board lot of trading is 100 shares but five shares will be considered a board lot for convenience of traders.

Shares not traded as a board lot normally get less than market but BCRIC owners of five shares or more will get full market value.

These special regulations are all in effect until Jan. 31.

In a steady market the value is half-way between bid and offering price. So if BCRIC shares are bid at $6 and offered at $6.50, the next trade almost inevitably will be half way between — $6.25. But if there are more sellers than buyers it would be $6 and if more buyers than sellers $6.50.

"It is impossible to predict stock prices — it is a matter of matching buy and sell orders," Scott said.

"But the market will begin in an orderly manner. There is no reason for panic.

"The price may go down in the first few days, but don't worry. It will come up again. My advice is to hang on to the shares because they will increase in value month by month."

E & N has busy year

A total of 37,000 passengers have taken the Victoria-to-Courtenay passenger train so far this year, John Cooper of Victoria, chairman of the E & N Steering Committee, said Friday.

The figure was only 8,000 short of the record of 45,000-passenger total in the whole of 1978, he said.

About 7,700 passengers rode the Dayliner last month, compared to only 4,000 for the same month last year.

Woman stabbed

A 35-year-old woman is in custody charged with attacking her mother and wounding her with a knife in an early morning stabbing incident in the city.

The 64-year-old victim is in stable condition in Victoria General Hospital recovering from multiple stab wounds.

Police are withholding both names.

The incident occurred about 5 a.m. at an apartment on Dowler Place.

A police spokesman said the daughter will appear before a justice-of-the-peace on Sunday

Chrysler asks union to help bail it out

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The financially stricken Chrysler Corp., in an unprecedented move for one of the Big Three automakers, asked the United Auto Workers (UAW) Friday for a two-year freeze on wages and benefits.

UAW President Douglas A. Fraser called the proposal unacceptable, but did not rule out special considerations for Chrysler after a pattern for a new three-year auto industry contract has been set at General Motors and the Ford Motor Co.

The UAW has already ruled out Chrysler as a strike target and joined the company in asking Washington for $1 billion in financial help. The union, known for its bargaining innovations, is considered likely to press for non-economic contract breakthroughs in exchange for any financial concessions it may make.

In an apparent attempt to dramatize the company's plight and show Washington it intends to streamline operations, Chrysler President Lee A. Iacocca appeared personally at the bargaining table.

For nearly two hours, Iacocca reportedly made a detailed presentation of Chrysler's financial woes, including its staggering $207.1 million second-quarter loss, and outlined the company's plans for recovery, including details of the small, fuel-efficient cars it plans for 1981.

Fraser contended the proposal amounted to a wage cut, not a freeze. Figuring inflation at 12½ per cent over the next two years, Chrysler workers would be taking a 25 percent pay cut, he said. Auto workers now receive about $9 an hour in wages and another $6 in benefits.

Somoza sent packing

Former Nicaraguan president Anastasio Somaza, booted out of the Bahamas because of the security problem he posed, has flown to an undisclosed location. There is speculation he may be in the U.S. or Guatemala. Meanwhile, Captain Mark Elliott, who took Somoza's retinue to from Miami to Great Exuma Island aboard a luxury yacht about two weeks ago, complained that "Somoza and his bunch are nothing but a bunch of slobs. I estimate that the Somoza party did more than $3,000 damage to my boat."

The Queen, Prince Philip and Prince Andrew have ended their African visit. In her final message, sent to Zambian President Kenneth Kaunda, the Queen said: "We have been moved by the warmth of the reception given to us everywhere."

Diagnostic tests show that tennis star Arthur Ashe may have suffered a heart attack before he was admitted to New York Hospital this week. The hospital said Ashe, 36, was in "good condition" and would probably be removed from the coronary unit to a regular room today.

Actor Dan Haggarty, who co-starred with a bear in the Grizzly Adams TV series, pleaded no contest in Los Angeles Friday to misdemeanor charges of reckless driving and beating two Highway Patrol officers who tried to examine a vial of "white powder." Haggarty, 35, was fined $600, placed on probation for two years and ordered to donate 100 hours of work time to socially useful projects.

Former U.S. president Richard Nixon has scrapped plans to buy a luxury Manhattan apartment in the wake of protests from residents who did not want him as a neighbor.

Billy Carter, the U.S. president's feisty brother, took to the saddle while visiting field-dog trainer John Rex Gates at his summer kennel in Melita, Manitoba. Indiana farmer John Moore, a member of Carter's party, says Billy adapted well to the grueling daily horseback rides during the week-long holiday.

External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald will fly to London from Zambia Aug. 11 for the National Ballet of Canada's last performance at Covent Garden.

Lynne Frederick, 25, fourth wife of 53-year-old British comedian Peter Sellers, has filed for divorce in Los Angeles. Frederick said recently she learned her marriage was over when she read it in the newspapers, "and this hurt me." Married for three years, the couple had been separated.

And in Minneapolis about 200 old friends turned out Friday for the funeral of Augie Ratner, a retired boxer and night club owner who had placed a classified ad seeking mourners eight years before he died. Ratner, who died at age 78 in a nursing home Wednesday, said in the ad he wanted to know what his funeral was "likely to draw." He asked, "If you plan to attend my funeral, of whatever unpredictable date, please drop me a line . . . so that I may know whether to expect you." Ratner received several hundred affirmative replies.

Airport protest pays off

LONDON (Reuter) — Customs officers at London's Heathrow Airport found a package of heroin with a street value of more than $2 million today during stepped-up anti-smuggling checks which are part of a work-to-rule campaign.

The biggest drug haul this year at Heathrow delighted customs staff, who are fighting government plans to reduce their numbers.

"This backs up our argument that we need more customs officers," union official Geoff Eteson said.

Customs officers at all Britain's sea and airports have been sticking strictly to surveillance rules since Friday.

The heroin found today was in luggage taken through the "nothing to declare" section.

Customs officers stopped a man about to take a taxi after a flight from the Middle East.

They gave no details of the weight of the package they found but said its value on the black market would be the equivalent of $2 million.

British plans to reduce its customs staff this year by 1,800 as part of a drive to reduce government spending and improve the state of the economy.

Union officials contend that if they were given extra staff they could bring in revenue by catching more smugglers and making them pay duty.

Queen Mum's 79

LONDON (AP) — Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother turned 79 today, and the uncommon woman Britons, Canadians and others affectionately call the "Queen Mum" remains as untiring as ever, say her aides.

"She's indefatigable, not like the rest of us," said one hard-worked woman member of her staff at Clarence House, her London home near Buckingham Palace.

So far this year the Queen Mother has visited Canada, France, Scotland and the north of England, called in at a nuclear submarine base, deputized in the absence of her daughter, met the president of Kenya, opened an iron ore terminal and attended the races at the Derby and Royal Ascot.

She is colonel-in-chief of a score of army regiments, and her latest job is Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, a 900-year-old ceremonial post in which she was installed last week.

The Queen Mum, whose husband, King George VI, died in 1952, will spend her birthday at Clarence House. Then she leaves for a two-month vacation in Scotland, staying part of the time at her Castle of Mey in remote and windy Caithness-shire.

Oil giants pay 2.2% U.S. tax

Washington Star

WASHINGTON — The eight largest multinational petroleum companies in 1977 paid only $1.4 billion in federal income taxes, an effective rate of 2.2 per cent on $64.2 billion in revenues, according to a Treasury Department analysis of federal tax returns.

While the multinationals reduced their taxes through use of the foreign tax credit, the Treasury report said the eight largest oil companies without foreign operations paid an effective tax rate of 6.5 per cent. The eight domestic companies earned $26.2 billion and paid $392 million in taxes.

The eight largest multinationals had sales 10 times higher than the eight largest domestic oil companies, yet paid income taxes that were only four times higher, largely because of the foreign credit.

Supporters of the credit say it is designed to prevent double taxation of revenues by companies that operate outside the United States. Multinationals reduce their U.S. liability dollar-for-dollar against taxes paid to foreign countries.

Critics of the credit claim the oil companies are abusing the credit, which shifts the burden of paying for federal programs onto other taxpayers.

DC-10 crash 'bizarre'

Los Angeles Times

CHICAGO — McDonnell Douglas officials acknowledged Friday that the DC-10's hydraulic, electric and slat systems were not designed to withstand a major structural failure such as the loss of a pylon and engine that occurred in the crash here May 25.

"We did not design these systems for a massive structural failure," Charles Dundore, Douglas Aircraft Co.'s chief program engineer for DC-10 design in Long Beach, Calif., said.

Dundore and other representatives of the DC-10 manufacturer was testifying before the National Transportation Safety Board.

The company's DC-10 experts defend the hydraulic, electric and slat systems as reliable and as having good backup capabilities. They said that none of the systems failed by themselves in the accident but that they were destroyed by "a very bizarre set of circumstances," when the left pylon and engine broke away from the left wing shortly after takeoff.

This asymmetrical slat condition slowed the plane and forced it to bank, and the severing of the electric cable knocked out a warning to the pilot that the plane was about to reach a "stall" condition in which it would not have enough speed to remain airborne.

Not knowing that the craft was about to stall, the pilot reduced the plane's speed, as his flight manual directed him to do in such a case.

Iran vote going Khomeini's way

TEHRAN (AP) - Early election returns made public today showed that Islamic fundamentalists loyal to the Ayatollah Khomeini will make up almost the entire assembly that will write Iran's post-revolutionary constitution.

Interior Minister Hashem Sabaghian said 383 of the 417 candidates who ran Friday were mullahs, or Moslem clergymen.

However, Sabaghian conceded the turnout was light.

The government has not given figures for the voter turnout Friday, but most secular political groups boycotted the balloting, alleging lack of democratic procedures, and this effectively cleared the way for a sweep of the 73-member assembly by Khomeini's Islamic Republic party.

The party wants a constitution that proclaims Iran an Islamic state, Khomeini's goal ever since the Shiite Moslem leader launched the revolution.

Sometime after the official voting results are in Monday, the assembly will meet, discuss and ratify a new constitution. The charter will be presented to the people for quick approval and parliamentary elections will follow.

Bilingual labelling

The federal government made a sensible move this week when it agreed to rescind an order forcing all importers to have bilingual French-English labelling on their packages by Aug. 26.

The excuse made was that the enforcement order had been made by some bureaucrat, and when it was pointed out to the politicians, they hastily changed their minds.

It's not really a good excuse: bureaucrats issue enforcement orders only because the politicians have originally set up policies and regulations that need to be enforced.

Nonetheless, the end result showed common sense, a rare enough commodity among governments that it is deserving of praise.

No one is against providing labels that can be read by both our French and English-speaking citizens where it makes economic and practical sense to do so. Canadian manufacturers can provide bilingual labels on packages at no or little extra cost. Indeed, many of them find it more economic to do so than to manufacture two sets of packages, one for the Quebec market and one for the rest of the country.

The requirement that the same bilingual labels be applied to all imported products, however, does not make sense. Most foreign manufacturers are not providing a line of products strictly for the Canadian market; their products are probably going also to the U.S., where virtually no one speaks French, and perhaps to many other English-speaking countries as well.

Government insistence on bilingual labelling is not going to lead to better labelled packages for Canadians. It is just going to mean many fewer imports available to us. Few international firms, particularly in specialized fields, are going to bother changing their worldwide labels to satisfy some petty Canadian government regulation.

Doubtless even most Quebecers would rather have the products available labelled only in English than not have them available at all.

Cancellation of the enforcement order is a good first step. The government should follow it up with a thorough review of all bilingual labelling regulations to ensure they aren't doing more harm than good to the Canadian consumer.

Salaries for aldermen

Victoria's city fathers made a sensible decision this week when they agreed to recommend a five per cent salary for themselves for 1979.

One of the hardest jobs of municipal elected officials is to decide on their own salaries, trying to balance what they think they're worth, the amount of time they put into the job, the amount it actually costs them in expenses, and what they think the taxpayer will tolerate.

The five per cent increase for Victoria mayor and aldermen seems to strike this balance quite nicely.

Some increase in pay was obviously deserved, just to keep up with the increasing cost of gasoline for driving to meetings and other direct expenses.

By keeping the increase lower than both the increase in the cost-of-living and the increase given municipal staff, however, the council members showed they are serious about the cause of government spending restraint and are willing to make some sacrifices, albeit minor ones, in that cause.

Even as this praise is given out, however, it should be tempered with a hope that this is the last time that the aldermen will have to decide their own salaries. It really isn't fair to them to force them to make those decisions themselves.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm has said previously he is considering developing a salary scale for elected officials, one that might tie aldermen's salaries to the population of their community as well as to increases in private sector wages and the cost of living.

It's much to be hoped that such a scale is in operation before elected officials across B.C. begin struggling to decide what to pay themselves in 1980.

PAUL WHITELAW

Ottawa not so fat anymore

OTTAWA — Marion Dewar bristles to hear herself described as mayor of Fat City.

But she concedes grudgingly that is the impression a lot of Canadian taxpayers have of the nation's capital.

"It's simply not true," insists the Ottawa mayor.

Despite a popular belief the capital is located at the end of a rainbow that has a pot overflowing with federal dollars, Dewar says her city is suffering through economic "doldrums."

That's because hard times have befallen Ottawa's main industry — producing "red tape."

If the capital deserved its Fat City nickname when the federal bureaucracy was growing by leaps and bounds, particularly during the first half of the decade, it has been put on a crash diet.

The bureaucrats who are the mainstay of Ottawa's economy are under attack, their numbers reduced and futures threatened by latter-day efforts of the Liberals and now the Conservatives to curb runaway costs.

Cutting the lean now

Here are some of the harsh facts of economic life now being faced by Ottawa's 295,000 residents.

☐ A three-month freeze on all ublic Service hiring announced recently by the Tories.

☐ A Tory campaign promise to cut 60,000 people from the government payroll across the nation over the next three years. Excluding the military and Crown corporations that may be "privitized," about 40,000 positions are to be axed from the Public Service and that means up to 10,000 jobs could disappear in the capital region.

☐ A pre-election Liberal effort at fat-trimming that resulted in a decrease of 3,581 jobs from the nationwide public service payroll in 1978. Naturally, many of those jobs were located in and around Ottawa.

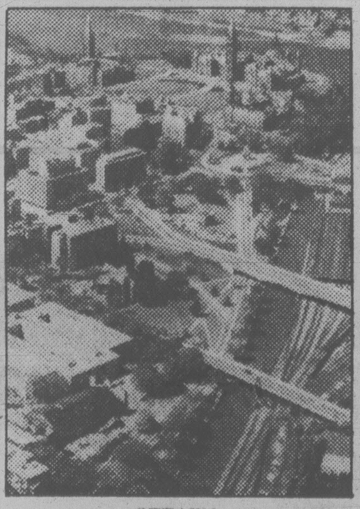
☐ Transfers of more than 12,000 government workers across the Ottawa river to Hull, Que., over the past three years. Part of the Liberals' effort to save Confederation, they emptied several Ottawa office buildings and one real estate man estimates more than two million square feet remain vacant.

Not surprisingly, Ottawa's government workers are in a fearful and angry mood. They made their sentiments known in the May 22 election by defeating incumbent MPs Robert de Cotret and Jean Pigott, both Tory superstars.

To a city which considered itself recession-proof almost from the day Queen Victoria elevated it to capital status, the economic spinoff of these developments has come as a shock.

There's a glut of more than 3,200 houses and condominiums up for sale and several hundred new houses have been vacant for up to two years. Although Ottawa remains one of the country's costliest housing markets, it is one of the few places where prices dropped last year, by about one per cent.

"Traditionally, there has been a regular growth in government employment that keeps the market buoyant as new families move into the city," says Bill Maxwell, head of the Royal Trust's real estate office here. "But what is happening to the public service is having a depressing effect."



OTTAWA

. . . jobs cut, houses empty

During the recent boom years, downtown Ottawa got a facelift as shopping plazas were built beneath new office towers. Now, downtown merchants complain that transfers to Hull have cut into their passing trade and an Ottawa lawyer notes: "I'm doing a record business in bankruptcies."

Retail sales have taken a nosedive, increasing in a recent two-month period by one per cent over the previous year — even though price increases should have boosted it by 8.5 per cent.

Dewar, who was elected to the mayor's job last fall, describes herself as an "optimist" about the city's future. She says the cutbacks in the bureaucracy may be the catalyst that will help Ottawa diversify its economy.

"The city is becoming competitive," says the mayor, referring to the fact that private office building owners must now attempt to lure non-government tenants.

"The federal government used to lease new office space before the bulldozer had even broken the ground," she adds. "There was no incentive to look for other business."

Echoing the mayor's remarks is board of trade executive director Warren Ralph, who cites Ottawa as an ideal head office city.

He points to a high degree of bilingualism among the work force, the city's location in the centre of the country and its "comfortable" size — about 295,000 people living within the city limits and a total metropolitan population of about 500,000.

However, both he and the mayor agree the city can lessen by only a slight degree its dependence on the bureaucracy as the major industry.

Losing $20 million

Dewar maintains the federal government has been callous in its treatment. She charged that federal planning was shortsighted.

"I'm not against decentralization," she states, "but when you combine the move of jobs out of Ottawa with the hiring freeze and the announced cutbacks, it's just been a disaster."

Dewar notes that when plans were adopted to switch jobs to Hull, it had been assumed the public service would continue to grow "by five to seven per cent a year."

One of her biggest gripes is that the government doesn't carry a fair share of the municipal tax burden. Because federal offices and buildings are not subject to real estate and business taxes, the city will receive a $33,403,000 "grant in lieu" in 1979. That's about 28 per cent of the municipal budget.

However, Dewar claims that grant is $20 million less than the city could collect if the government were assessed like private business.

In the mayor's view, an example of the inequity is the 10-year-old National Arts Centre which she says is "costing the city $2.5 million in lost property taxes a year."

Of course, the theatre complex wouldn't have been built in the first place with federal dollars if Ottawa weren't the capital.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Kids from the street Come to City Hall

You've probably seen them when you've been shopping at the Yates Street liquor store, waiting for a bus at the corner of Douglas and Yates or going to a restaurant in Bastion Square.

And you've probably avoided them because they looked unkempt, and their conversation was sprinkled with four-letter words, and they were asking for quarters from passersby.

They have been labelled "the undesirables" by downtown merchants, the "less desirable elements" by many police officers, "multi-problem kids" by many social workers. There have been petitions asking the city to take action to stop them from "ruining" the downtown area.

On Thursday a delegation of them came to City Hall to tell their side of the story — and to reveal themselves as impassioned, articulate, troubled young people, eager both to find better opportunities for themselves and to help children even younger from becoming captives of the street.

Most of them are 16, 17, 18 years old. They have seen more of the seamy side of life than many people three times their age. They speak of prostitution, of drug abuse, of violence as part of everyday life.

They are not sentimental. They do not ask for pity. The street has no room for sentimentality or pity. What you see there makes you tough.

They told their stories as if they were matter of fact tales, apparently almost unaware how close they were to moving hard-boiled and cynical politicians and reporters to tears.

The street does seem to foster a degree of self-analysis that is surely unusual in teenagers. Most of the kids are willing to accept some responsibility for at least part of their situation. Most understand the nature of the conflict within themselves that brings them back downtown day after day, even though they know that for them, the street can only lead to a dead end.

"We've got a good thing going, but it's also ripping us apart, a lot of us," said Ian (not his real name).

Social worker Shirley Wakeham put it a little differently. The street, she said, "seems like the best option to people who haven't got very good options."

What is good about it is put clearly by both Shirley and the kids. The group of street people is the only family — in the emotional sense — that the kids recognize. The street is the only place they find support, acceptance, friendship, a shoulder to lean on, somebody to trust.

A few have natural families who do care about them but with whom communication has long since broken down. Far more come from broken homes, or have been thrown out of the house, or for one reason or another have been in foster homes or group homes for years.

Ian said that since he left home at 13, he had probably been put by the government in 30 or 40 places.

Then he paused. "No," he said, "that's probably an exaggeration. It's probably really only about 20."

Andrea, 16, told of being thrown out of her foster home when the foster parents returned from holidays. "They just said they didn't want any more kids."

Lacking any security at "home," they band together to provide each other with as much support and friendship as they can. Their only adult support comes from Shirley, a few other social workers, a very few police officers, and in recent days, Ald. Robin Blencoe who arranged their appearance at city hall.

And, warned Andrea, after enough years struggling on the street, that just isn't enough.

She talked of the street people who hang around Bastion Square whom she described as being a much "tougher" group than the "Yates Street kids" who came to city hall.

"I really feel sorry for them," she said, "because they've given up on themselves . . . they don't trust anybody any more." A few of them, she said, invest all their emotions in their guitars. Others "just don't care about anything or anybody . . . they don't even care about themselves any more."

Greg, at 22 the oldest of the group who came, a veteran of eight years on the street, echoed her thoughts, perhaps unconsciously. "I don't trust nobody," he said. "I been let down too many times."

Greg was the only one who could not visualize getting off the street. "I'll probably be there another eight years," he said. "I don't know nothing else."

All the others wanted to make it on their own, wanted to find better ways to get what they need. A few have already obtained jobs or are training for jobs; others would like a place to go where they could be helped to find employment, or even to make crafts they could sell.

"Opportunities, that's what we want, opportunities," said Ian.

They also want somebody to help the younger children who are already beginning to live on the street, some of them as young as eight. They sleep in parked cars or boxcars or empty buildings; they steal to eat.

Andrea said those kids were more needing of help than the group that came. "We know how to make it on our own," she said. "We've learned. But they're just little kids. It shouldn't be that you're a little kid and you wake up in the morning and nobody loves you. You have nowhere to go, you have nowhere to eat, and you have to steal if you want to eat."

No, Andrea, it shouldn't be. — B.McL.

Stop complaining

I would like to congratulate Victoria development commissioner Barry Mayhew for his recent comments in the press concerning the problems met by developers in the Greater Victoria area from environmentalists, citizen groups and government "red tape."

As a member of the board of the economic commission since its conception, and also because I am in the construction industry, I was very concerned by the delay in certain developments, at considerable cost to the developers. Invariably, the projects would be completed as they were originally designed — the only loser, the developer — but some politician got media coverage. As for the environmentalists, if we had always listened to them, we would still be living in caves and swinging clubs.

The citizens' groups also bother me — I often wonder what half these people do for a living. I suppose they all have nice safe nine to five jobs, or are retired so their attitude is: "I'm all right Jack." It would be very nice if one could buy a small lot in an undeveloped area and be able to dictate what was going to be built on the next lot. If a person wants to be in this position, then he should purchase the whole development.

I am sure that politicians would take little notice of one citizen complaining. Why then should they listen any more to one particular group? — Ivan Crossett, 504 Wilson Street.

Ignoring problem

How archaic! It is not enough that Victoria discharges millions of gallons of untreated human excrement out into the ocean, but permission is still being given for individual households to dump it right onto our shores (Times, July 28).

Articles have been published describing waterless toilets, which, although not perfected for large urban developments, are suitable for rural areas and individual homes, for example the Clivus Multrum toilet and others. Such waterless toilets reduce human and kitchen waste to an odorless, germ free residue that can be used as compost, so shouldn't the onus be on builders and owners to incorporate such systems into new homes that cannot be hooked into sewers or are unsuitable for septic tanks?

Unlike land-locked cities, Victoria can conveniently sweep it's sewage out to sea, but one vile perennial reminds us that such action is far from the perfect solution, i.e. the yearly list of polluted beaches.

Are we ever going to tackle and vanquish the problem of sewerage pollution? — Ruby A. Pearson, 2085 Avondale Road.

Saved our farm

On July 31 at approximately 4:30 p.m., our barn at 1571 Burnside Road burst into flames. We would like to commend the Saanich fire department, police and all the neighbors and children who worked so hard on that very hot day to put out the main fire and contain the additional fires which started in the surrounding dry grass.

Too often organizations such as the fire and police departments are taken for granted, quoted as overpaid and under worked. On a day as hot as it was, with a large barn, a ton of hay and thousands of board feet of lumber burning it takes a special breed of person to cope. They struggled under tense pressure, extreme heat, a shortage of water, traffic jams and onlookers, yet remained calm and compassionate.

On behalf of Nettie, Michael, John, Carol, Cori-Ann, Becky, and Jamie we would like to send our bouquets to all who helped. Their combined efforts and concern protected and saved our farm, cattle and horses from certain disaster.

Thanks to you all — Carol Anna Isdahl, 1571 Burnside Road West.

Much higher

Each month I read that food prices are up nine per cent or so and shake my head. Has the news media ever verified those 400 items with a separate source? These are items I have purchased in the last year with the price differences:

Kraft Peanut Butter, 3 lbs.	$2.29 to $3.73 ($4.15 1½ kilo)
Carnation Powdered Milk, 1 lb.	.99 to 1.77
Beef Liver, Regular	1.19 to 1.99 (in abt. 3 mos.)
Canned Corned Beef, 12 oz.	1.09 to 1.67
Sockeye Salmon, 7¾ oz.	1.29 to 1.99
Dates, 1 lb.	.79 to 1.29
Muffets	.69 to 1.13

Everyone realizes what has happened to the price of orange juice, canned fruits and juices, raisins and cocoa. What is most interesting is that Canadian apple and tomato juice has risen just as fast as those canned imports which cost 17 per cent more due to exchange.

Now even at the last figure of 13 per cent given by the government there would seem to be something radically wrong with their computer — Martin Sweny, 3341 Doncaster Drive.

Rights for children brings on a backlash

For the past several weeks, my friendly office mail carrier has brought me regards from a large number of people who seem to think of family life as a power struggle between us (parents) and them (children). According to these correspondents, anyone who is in favor of "them" is a traitor to "us."

The first batch of letters came after I suggested that spanking was not the best way to bring up baby. For this radical notion, I received enough copies of the proverb "Spare the Rod and Spoil the Child" to paper my living room.

The second batch came after I disagreed with the U.S. Supreme Court and said that a kid should be entitled to a hearing before he was committed to a mental hospital. According to one jovial soul, this opinion made me "part of the conspiracy trying to undermine parental authority, break up families and ferment (sic) juvenile delinquency."

I share this now, not just to give you a sample of my mail, but to explain how a woman like Pat Wald came to be called an "instrument of the devil."

Pat Wald is a 50-year-old assistant attorney-general of the United States who has been nominated to the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington. Her background reads like a model resume in search of a perfect judge. A graduate of Yale Law School, she clerked in the "right" sort of court, worked for the "right" sort of firm, spent most of her career doing public-interest law and comes recommended by a wide spectrum of legal lofties. Even her enemies have called her Supreme Court material.

But Mrs. Wald is also a prime target of Republican Gordon Humphrey of New Hampshire, a senator of underwhelming talent who is mobilizing the right-wing opposition against confirmation of her appointment. As part of his campaign, Humphrey corralled evangelist Bob Jones into testifying before the Judiciary Committee, where Jones labelled Mrs. Wald's opinions "evil," "nefarious," "godless" and, yes, an "instrument of the devil."

What hellish activity hath she wrought in 30 years of law practice or in the ten years she spent at home raising her five children? Well, it appears that in 1974 she wrote a speech called, "Making Sense Out of the Rights of Youth."

According to Sen. Humphrey's testimony, which he sent across the land, in that speech Mrs. Wald stated her beliefs that (1) children are treated like slaves; (2) 12-year-olds should vote; and (3) a government lawyer should examine every disagreement between a child and his parents. Only a bona fide graduate of the Manchester Union-Leader School of Out-Of-Context-Quotations would have excerpted those views.

Mrs. Wald's speech was actually a provocative and fascinating attempt to lay out the current thinking, controversies and problems in a relatively new area of the law: an adolescent's rights. She raised the point that we ought to somehow tailor the rights of young people to their developmental stage. She talked about ways in which we might gradually and in an orderly way allow minors into the decision-making process of their lives — giving them more self-determination in matters of medicine, economics and politics as they were prepared for them.

She said, for example, that, "perhaps the most basic right children should have in their relationship with all adults . . . is the right to know, to comprehend, to challenge and to participate meaningfully in all the decisions that vitally affect their lives."

In response to this "nefarious" thought, Rev. Jones answered, "Children obey your parents." He added: "1 Timothy speaks of a man having his children in subjection and speaks of a man ruling his children in his household." Period. At no time did anyone remind the Judiciary Committee that in Biblical days a child became an adult at age 13.

There are, it seems, two visions of family life today. The first sees a hierarchical power structure in which children must be subject to parental rule at 7 or 17, just as they were in the 19th Century. In those days, we were allowed to indenture or even abuse our children without government interference.

The second vision is of a family in which parents are trying to raise children, not keep them subject. This view sees the job of society and parents as helping youths to manage the transitions from a protected childhood to a responsible adulthood. It sees youth not as a period of delayed adulthood but as a time of increased authority and autonomy.

Tycoon's private empire to be curbed by Brazil

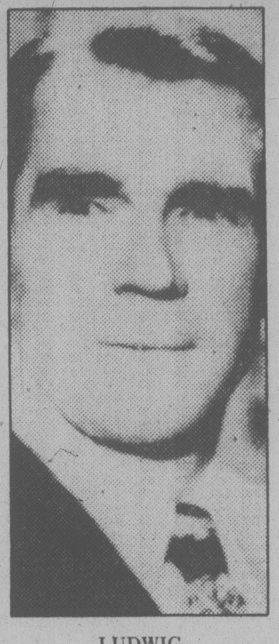
By JAN ROCHA

SAO PAULO — The Brazilian government is to take urgent steps to establish its authority over Jari, the giant experimental farm on the Amazon belonging to the billionaire American shipowner, Daniel Ludwig.

After visiting the area, Interior Minister Mario Andreazza announced that foreigners would not be allowed to establish enterprises on this scale in future, though he dismissed claims that Jari was a threat to national security.

The farm — bigger than Belgium — has aroused Brazilian suspicions as a private empire and a "foreign enclave".

It occupies an area of 1,600,000 hectares in the northern Amazon, with direct access to the Atlantic from a deep-water port on the River Jari, an Amazon tributary.



LUDWIG
. . . Amazon farm

Here the aging Ludwig has constructed an empire entirely free from any constraint by Brazilian authorities. Vast rice paddies have been created along the river's fertile margins with the help of Dutch dike engineers. Over 100,000 hectares of Amazon jungle have been cleared and replaced with Californian pine and the fast growing gmelina tree, native to Asia.

Twelve thousand cattle and buffalo provide meat for the 35,000 people living in on the Jari farm. Its infrastructure includes several thousand miles of dirt roads, a 28-mile railway, supermarkets, housing, schools and clinics.

The Jari company has its own police force and its own liquor laws. Hundreds of vehicles circulate without number plates — they are all Jari's. The deep-water port gives direct access to ocean-going ships — with no Brazilian customs control. Access to Jari is possible only with company permission.

After his visit of inspection, Interior Minister Andreazza admitted the government had been "omissive" and that public authority departments like police, health and customs must be urgently installed.

What remain unknown is the fate of Jari after the death of Ludwig, who has no heirs and is in his seventies.

STRAY FEATHERS

Harold Hosford

If I was going to see them, I'd chosen the right kind of day. The sea was dead calm, the tide was near slack, and the sun was still low enough in the east to give the kind of silhouettes I thought I'd need to not only see them, but to identify them as well.

"Them" were Northern Phalaropes, and, as I hunkered down with my back against a good solid rock, I thought again of how often — when I really want to find some species of sea-bird — I end up at Clover Point. I guess the reason must be that I seldom draw a blank there. I may not always come up with what I'm looking for, but I never leave without finding something of interest.

So it was that last Saturday morning, with phalaropes on my mind, I chose Clover Point.

It was only after a quick scan of the sea had produced nothing more than a couple of distant gulls and an errant White-winged Scoter — to say nothing of a magnificent view of the Olympics — that I decided to take a place among the rocks and consider what was nearby and obvious — the gulls of Clover Point.

Three good-sized bunches of gulls were holding court at the point that day, two on the rocks and the ever present plume over the outfall. I ignored the latter — the sun was wrong for good viewing — and concentrated on those on the rocks.

They were a motley lot. Some were in the nondescript gray plumage of this year's young; some were two-year-olds showing some signs of their adult plumage; and there were others — third-year birds — that were only a year away from adulthood. But identifying most of these immature birds gives me the "willies." So I ignored them and turned my attention to the adult birds scattered among them. These included the usuals — Glaucous-winged, Mew, California, and Bonaparte's — as well as a couple of "finds", two Heerman's Gulls and a Ring-billed Gull; the first migrants from the south, the latter from the interior.

It was while looking at the Ring-bill, and working out the details that made it a Ring-bill, that I noticed the fuzzy forms of birds darting about on the surface of the water behind it — phalaropes!

I knew they were phalaropes even before I got the glasses focused on them. That darting, pirouetting, feeding habit was all that was needed. It was all I got because the birds were up-sun and silhouetted. But any birder worth his salt would have known them for phalaropes, and any phalarope in Juan de Fuca in July is almost sure to be a Northern.

There must have been a hundred of them, spread over the water downstream from the outfall, picking tidbits from the surface of the water, darting back and forth and making tight little pirouettes in typical phalarope fashion.

So, my quarry had been found. Now I could think about why I was so anxious to see them.

Northern Phalaropes are one of my bench-marks of the season. Their appearance, usually in mid-July, along with the Common Terns and Parasitic Jaegers, which appear a little later, mark the beginning of my autumns. Sure, there may have been earlier migrants from the north; sure, there may be a lot of warm summer weather ahead, but with these three kinds of birds on the stage the scene begins to take on a truly fall flavor.

And why is fall so important? Well, most birders will tell you that next to spring, fall is the most exciting time of the year for birding. There are even a few who will say fall is more exciting and I'm one of the latter.

But whether you vote for spring or fall, both are seasons of great activity and movement among the birds. And one of the best places for a ring-side seat to this show is still Clover Point. I know; I've got my rock reserved.

On Language

What's in a trademark brand name?

Five years ago, I described a possible shift of administration officers as "Cabinet scrabble." Promptly, the Selchow & Righter Company complained of my "improper" use of its trademark: "There are as many crossword games being sold as there are cola drinks and cameras," wrote the advertising manager, "but there is only one Scrabble brand, one Coca-Cola brand, and one Kodak brand. The descriptive name of our product is crossword game. The trademark is Scrabble." Testily, I replied I would not soon again plug its head-breaking entertainment; besides, I can never get the "J" on a triple-scoring square.

Of late, we have all been watching a television commercial starring Robert Young — a doctor who plays an actor, or vice versa — who was using a locution no human being in a normal situation would ever use: "Try Sanka brand decaffeinated coffee." Why the strange turn of phrase — why not just the conversational "Try Sanka"? The viewer could almost hear the ad manager in the background, afflicted with coffee nerves and surrounded by lawyers, whispering, "The descriptive name of our product is decaffeinated coffee: The trademark is Sanka."

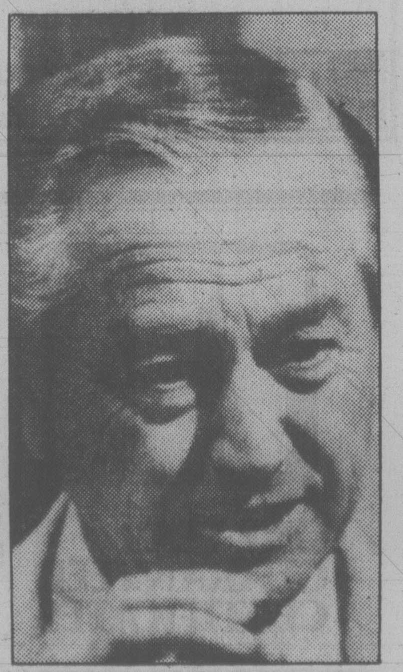
The Scrabble and Sanka lawyers are absolutely right to worry about familiarity breeding contempt: if a trademark becomes generic — applicable to a genus, kind, or group — anybody can use it.

Last month, the Federal Trade Commission struck terror among the companies with trade names by moving against Formica, a corporation that makes plastic laminated counter tops. In the past, trademarks were lost because they fell into disuse, but now — for the first time — the government is seeking to remove the trademark for a linguistic reason: that the word has become generic.

This is not merely a case of companies fighting over trademarks, as when United Drug wrested the exclusive use of aspirin from Bayer, or when Du Pont unsuccessfully sued Waxed Products for infringement of cellophane, or when Otis lost escalator to another elevator company and later to critics of the Vietnam War. This was Uncle Sam acting as Uncle Same, and shudders went through all the household words: "Don't put the jello in the plexiglas dish in the deepfreeze, Dr. Welby — put it in the frigidaire — while I change into my levi's to throw a frisbee around."

When a trademark gets into the dictionaries, it may be in trouble. When Merriam-Webster's Third Unabridged came out in 1961, the brand-name crowd was dismayed: "The only word capitalized was 'God,'" moans Dorothy Fey, executive director of the U.S. Trademark Association. Since that time, most dictionaries — including Merriam-Webster — capitalize such household-word trademarks as "Deepfreeze," and identify them as trademarks. (Anybody can call a dictionary "Webster's.")

Now the battle is joined. The FTC says the householding of Formica would save the consumer money; industry replies that the trademark assures the consumer of known quality, and businessmen are urging Congress to induce the FTC to back off. Meanwhile, FTC official Alfred F. Dougherty Jr. has said that manufacturers would be better advised to avoid saying, "Buy Dougherty's" and instead to specify, "Buy Dougherty brand widgets." Admen everywhere are xeroxing that and scotch-taping it to the wall; that's why Robert Young cannot say, "Try Sanka."



YOUNG . . . whose Sanka now?

I think the government attack on names is an egregious example of overregulation. To put the shoe on the other foot: the Feds would hold it illegal for your local Lethargic Messengers to call themselves the U.S. Postal Service. A counterattack is called for: If my name were Fred T. Cookie, I would start issuing "The FTC Report." (That's not so outlandish: when a blue-jeans manufacturer named a line "FBI Blue Jeans," the government sued and lost — the judge ruled that nobody would think the FBI had gone into that business. No ruling yet on black bags.)

If some enterprising manufacturer now goes out and registers the name "Generic Drug Company," you will soon read about it in The New York Times brand Sunday-issued Magazine.

The only way

The adverb only has slipped its moorings, and now drifts anywhere in a sentence. Arthur Isler writes from Mexico: "Why do most people say, 'I only have eyes for you,' when they really mean, 'I have eyes only for you'?"

Only the other day I was humming that golden oldie and it never occurred to me that the sentence would gain emphasis if the only moved closer to the eyes. Frederick Mish, editorial director of the G. & C. Merriam Company, says: "More often than not, only qualifies the whole idea of a sentence, and in that use most naturally precedes the verb." But the songwriter could have written three other versions: "I have eyes only for you," "I have eyes for only you," or "I have eyes for you only."

"Most people would understand all four versions to mean essentially the same thing," notes lexicographer Mish, but he adds that the lonely only just not be allowed to float too far: "They would immediately recognize that 'only I have eyes for you' means something very different and less flattering."

We are talking here about the order of words in a sentence, a subject that transforms grammarians. My correspondent in Mexico takes the question a step further: "Why do people say, 'I don't think I'll go' when they really mean, 'I think I will not go'?"

I think I will not answer that, because I don't think there is a good answer in logic or grammar. I will only say, "An idiom is its own excuse for being." (I will say only? I only will say? Only I will say?)

The infix is on

The "whole nother" construction currently in vogue has caused head-scratching among readers and scholars: whence comes this phrase? ("Whence" means "from where"; it is a redundancy to write "from whence," as I did recently; might as well make a dent in the shame-on-you file.)

This rampant usage just might be the rarest of the rare: a printable American infix. Look up "infix" in any big dictionary: it is a letter or syllable inserted, or implanted, inside a word. The examples usually given are in Latin or Sanskrit; English words often have additions at the beginning or end (prefixes and suffixes) but are otherwise impregnable to infixes.

Only slang can split the atom of the English word. The Britishism "absobloodylutely" is a mild example; in the United States, a participle form of a vulgarism is occasionally inserted for emphasis, as with "in(obscenity)credible."

According to Richard Lederer, chairman of the English department of St. Paul's School, in Concord, N.H., "a whole nother" can be explained as an infix: "Some languages, such as Filipino," he writes, "are quite rich in infixes, but, in English, infixes appear to occur primarily in a few idiomatic expressions involving taboo words . . . It seems to me that 'a whole nother ball game' qualifies as a bona fide and printable example of the rare infix construction."

An infix must not be confused with a "quick fix," the derogation by politicians of a simplistic remedy, rooted in drug lingo; that, as people used to say colorlessly, is an entirely different situation.

Say it's a Saturday, and you want to make a date with somebody on the next day, a Sunday. Do you tell him you'll see him "this Sunday," or "next Sunday," or "this coming Sunday"?

Restaurant chain

MONTREAL (CP) — Pierre Desmarais, younger brother of Power Corp. chairman Paul Desmarais and former president of Power Corp. subsidiary Voyaguer Inc., says he plans to open eight Montreal-area restaurants under a franchise agreement with Lums Restaurant Corp. of Miami.

Frontier Names Vancouver Manager

VANCOUVER (August 4th)—Frontier Airlines has announced the appointment of Debbie La Freniere as city manager for Vancouver, a newly created position for Frontier's second terminal in Canada. Assisted by a staff of 10, she will be responsible for managing Frontier's over-all marketing and station operations in the Vancouver area.

She initially joined Frontier in 1974 when the airline was establishing its first Canadian terminal at Winnipeg. She served as assistant to Frontier's district sales manager there until 1977 when she took an executive post with a financial corporation in Toronto, a position held until she rejoined Frontier in May.

A native of Winnipeg, La Freniere completed her early education there and is currently enrolled in the Canadian Institute of Management, having attended the University of Manitoba and the University of Toronto.

She and her husband, Ron Dojack, a computer consultant, are now in the process of relocating to Vancouver. Addition of Vancouver to Frontier's routes on July 16 brought to 94 the number of airports seved by Frontier in 26 U.S. states, Mexico and Canada. The Denver (Colo.)-based airline operates a fleet of 36 Boeing 737 twinjets, each seating up to 106 passengers.

The airline now operates three daily flights from Vancouver, one flying to Spokane, Wash., and Salt Lake City, Utah, and the other two linking Vancouver to Spokane, Denver and additional U.S. cities in central and southern states.

Company reports

Pancanadian Pete

Pancanadian Petroleum Ltd. of Calgary reports a 14-per-cent gain in cash flow during the first half of 1979.

The company's interim report said cash flow reached $126 million or $4.04 a share, up from $111 million or $3.55 a share earlier.

Profit was up more than nine per cent to $78.9 million from $72.1 million.

Crude oil production was up five per cent to average 32,710 barrels a day. Natural gas sales rose nine per cent to 319 million cubic feet a day.

Halifax Ltd.

Halifax Developments Ltd. has reported gross unaudited income of $6,153,956 in the six months ended June 30, up from $5,725,112 in the same period in 1978.

The company said net income was $170,408 or 3.8 cents a share in the fist six months of 1979, up from $129,667 or 2.9 cents a share in 1978.

Investors Group

The Investors Group reports consolidated net operating income of nearly $25.6 million for the first half of 1979, compared to about $14.6 million for the same period last year.

After allowing for preferred dividends, earnings per share were $1.77 compared to $1.07 in 1978.

Central & Eastern

Central and Eastern Trust Co. has reported net income for the six months ended June 30 of $3,661,000 or 68 cents a share, compared with $3,482,000 or 65 cents a share in the same period in 1978.

Included in that net income were gains of $874,000, or 16 cents a share, on securities, loans and other assets, compared with a net loss on similar items of $44,000 or one cent a share in the first six months of 1978.

H. B. Rhude, chairman and chief executive officer, said changes in investment policy and stringent controls on operating costs helped improve Central's profit statement.

Algoma Steel

Algoma Steel Corporation sales have increased to $526.4 million from $420.6 million for the first six months of 1979.

Raw steel production rose to 1.8 million tons from 1.3 million tons and steel product shipments grew to 1.32 million tons from 1.27 million.

The Canadian Press earlier erroneously reported that sales increased to $526,415 from $420,576 and that raw steel production hit 1,765 tons from 1,321 tons and steel product shipments amounted to 1,321 tons — an increase from 1,269 tons at this time last year.

Pacific Gas

Pacific Northern Gas Ltd. has reported a net income of $957,153 for the six months ending June 30, compared to $660,116 in the first half of 1978.

The company said in a statement that earnings a share rose by 19 cents to 60 cents a share while operating revenues were $11.6 million, compared with $8.2 million in the corresponding period of 1978.

President John Anderson said the higher earnings resulted from a 24-per-cent increase in industrial sales after the new Canadian Cellulose pulp mill in Prince Rupert started late last year. Rate increases granted to the company were also a factor, he said.

The board of directors approved payment of the first dividend ever paid to the common shareholders of the company, granting 25 cents a share as of Sept. 14 to shareholders of record on Aug. 31.

SNC Group

The SNC Group reports profits of $1.3 million, or 42 cents a share, for the six months ended June 30, down from $1.8 million, or 63 cents a share, a year earlier.

The engineering and project management firm said sales for the six months were $53.1 million, up from $47 million.

Second-quarter profits were $876,000, or 28 cents a share, a drop from $976,000, or 34 cents a share, in the second quarter of 1978.

In his message to shareholders, company chairman Camille Dagenais said the lower figures were due to "a marked shift to dependence on overseas projects, which are more expensive to execute than those at home, and proposals for turnkey contracts are more costly."

Dagenais also said he hoped Ottawa would reconsider its policy of moving the Canadian embassy in Israel to Jerusalem from Tel Aviv, and "thus restore good relations with the Arab world which is Canada's third largest market."

Gregory

Gregory Industries Ltd. has reported a record net income of $1,178,524 during the six months ending June 30, up from $919,072 for the corresponding period in 1978.

Earnings a share rose to $1.36 from 89 cents last year, the company said in a statement.

Chairman Peter J. Gregory attributed the increase to higher selling prices, satisfactory productivity and benefits derived from ongoing capital improvements.

He said the board of directors recently approved a major expansion of the panelling division and construction has begun on a $4-million plant at Delta which should be operating by the spring of 1980.

A sawmill in the Yukon remains closed and is for sale while plans to build a sawmill at Anacortes, Wash., have been shelved, said Gregory.

Gregory said the higher cost of labor in the second half of the year, due to a recent record contract in the province's forest industry, a tighter log supply and an anticipated decrease in the United States market could result in a less profitable return during the rest of the year.

Domtar

Domtar Inc. reports unaudited first half profits of $43.3 million, double the $21.6 million declared for the same period in 1978.

The earnings before extraordinary items equalled $2.36 a common share, compared with $1.60 a share in 1978.

The corporation's profit for the second quarter, ending June 30, rose to $21.3 million from $12.8 million for the second quarter in 1978.

Domtar said the higher profits were the result of increased sales of fine papers, higher prices for pulp and "a favorable exchange rate for all pulp and paper products including newsprint."

The corporation also cited profits from the recently-acquired Reed corrugated linerboard operation.

Profits from Domtar's chemicals group increased slightly, while those from its Canadian construction materials section declined because of lower sales and reduced profit margins, and start-up costs at its new ceiling products plant in Cornwall, Ont.

GCOS

Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. reports its profits for the first half of this year increased by more than $4 million, although the benefit of receiving world prices for synthetic crude was largely offset by a maintenance shutdown.

Net profits increased to $15.49 million on revenues of $117.87, compared with $11.15 on revenues of $109.72 million for the same period in 1978.

The oil sands firm began receiving world prices for synthetic crude on April 4. However, the maintenance shutdown lasted four weeks.

The company said in a news release that higher prices were the chief factor in the 39 per cent increase in net profit between the first half of 1979 and the first six months of 1978. Synthetic crude production in the first half of this year was down 1.75 million barrels from the same period a year ago.

Great Canadian Oil Sands produces synthetic crude oil from mining the Athabsca oil sands in northeastern Alberta.

Reed

The long-troubled Reed Paper Ltd. has reported a first-half profit of $11.8 million or 53 cents a share in a dramatic turnaround.

Reed president D. A. MacIver said the outlook for the this year's balance is expected as good as the first half's earnings.

The latest period excludes a $5.5-million tax credit, making a final net income of $17.3 million or 81 cents a share.

The year-earlier figure excluded a $400,000 credit, making a final net loss of $6.6 million.

But he added that the outlook beyond 1979 is somewhat pessimistic because of the expected economic slowdown in the U.S.

Exposure to death can be too fast for children

A woman whose husband was dying took her four-year-old child to the graveyard.

She said, "This is where your grandfather is buried. Your father will be buried here. They'll put him in a box and bury him six feet down. Your father is dying."

Dr. Mary Brown, a clinical psychologist from Ottawa, gave the example in her talk to 80 "care givers" taking a workshop sponsored by the Sisters of St. Ann.

She was trying to show how not to expose children to the idea of death.

Brown says, "It was too much. It put too much on the child. It was too fast and too brutal."

The child in this case regressed to the age of one, sucking his thumb, wanting to take his mother's nipple.

Brown says: "He regressed because he didn't want to grow old and die like that."

Friday's workshop at Queenswood House, part of a four day series on death and bereavement, concentrated on children, how they perceive death and how they react to their own deaths.

Dr. Brown warned the participants against fairy tales. evasions, and heavy philosophical religious interpretations about death.

She says, "Use simple language. Use real language Be truthful. Say 'dead' and 'dying' and 'gone'."

Here is a sample conversation from Dr. Brown:

"Your Grandma died."

"Where is she?"

"We don't know. But we hope she is with God."

"Is she coming back?"

"No dear."

Brown says it is wrong to say "Grandma went on a trip" because when the child goes on a trip he may think "Grandma didn't come back. Will I come back?"

Dr. Brown told the group that it is good to take opportunities to talk about death in a natural way — for example when a pet dies. And she also warned against trying to fill up a void too quickly — buying a new pet immediately — and thus robbing the child of his natural mourning.

Dr. Brown outlined the stages of a child's awareness about death.

An infant has no conception of death. This starts to develop in the toddler and is experienced as separation anxiety When the mother goes away. even just into the kitchen, she has "died".

In the pre-school age, children are aware of death as a word. Death is seen as impermanent, like sleep. Whatever moves is living.

Between the ages of six and nine, the child has a growing awareness of death but it seems to happen only to old people. The death of a school-mate or sibling can be really traumatic at this age because that means "it could happen to me".

By the teen years, the concept of death is complete but it is denied for one's self.

Dr. Brown thinks this may, perversely, have something to do with the high rate of teenage suicides.

"Perhaps the fear of death is so great that they decide to take the choice themselves."

Brown also suggests that one of the reasons for the high suicide rate amoung teens (an estimated 1,000 a year in Canada) may be the fear of universal death by atom bomb or chemical poisoning.

She also says that teenagers who are dying are much harder to work with than children or adults because of their sense of being cheated.

"They are on the brink of life. They don't want to even countenance death. They imagine all the things they want to do."

Dr. Brown told the group that when children encounter death, either the death of a loved one or their own death, they commonly feel a horrible burden of guilt.

Nine-year-old leukemia victims were asked why they were sick. 29 out of 32 of them said, "Because I've been bad."

The same guilt is expressed by children who believe they have caused the death of someone near to them.

Dr. Brown warned that great care must be taken discussing death with children because for them the line between fantasy and reality is so thin.

"Children should have all questions about death answered in full, fitting frankly to the intellectual need."

Before the judge

Judge William Ostler ended a lengthy discussion in Victoria provincial court Friday by suggesting lawyers for 23 men charged in connection with Canada's largest marijuana seizure were to blame for any delays in getting the preliminary hearing under way.

The exchange came during regular weekly remand appearances by the men, charged in connection with the May 22 operation involving RCMP, Canadian Forces personnel and the destroyer HMCS Qu'Appelle at Sydney Inlet, 32 kilometres north of Tofino on Vancouver Island's west coast. Approximately 35 tons of the seized, high-grade Colombian marijuana, with a wholesale value of $56 million, was burned May 29 at the North Cowichan municipal incinerator.

Vancouver lawyer William Deverell began with a request for Ostler to reconsider changing the dates for the preliminary hearing, which is set for two weeks in November and two more weeks in December. Deverell said four of the men had been denied bail by Judge Fred Green recently and that a bail review Wednesday in Vancouver Supreme Court upheld the Victoria judge's decisions.

Because it now appeared unlikely any of the accused men will be granted bail in the near future, he asked Ostler to move the hearing up to the earliest date possible. Deverell said he doubted whether the hearing could be finished in the four-week time period budgeted because most of the men charged were of Spanish-speaking decent and did not speak English very well.

Lawyer Chris Considine, speaking on behalf of Dermod Owen-Flood, added that there was never any consultation with Owen-Flood about the dates and that the month of November was originally set and subsequently changed. He said Owen-Flood had set aside November and had other committments in the Supreme Court the following month.

The month of November was never formally set, Ostler told the lawyers, and consultation resulted in agreement with the present dates and Ostler was to try to make arrangements, which he did.

He ended the discussion by saying that he would do what he could to make other arrangements but told the lawyers not to be overly optomistic and not to blame the judges. He said it was their fault for dragging their feet all summer.

One of the 23 men complained in court that some of the group had problems with the food at Wilkinson Road jail where they are being held awaiting court proceedings.

William Francis Perka, 34, of Port Townsend, Wash., told Ostler some of the men were not accustomed to the food and were not eating some of the items, consequently not getting proper nutrition.

Perka said their relatives had been bringing in vitamin supplements but prison director David Schultz stopped the practice.

Ostler said the person to appeal to is the director of the prison and Perka said he would talk to Schultz.

A 39-year-old man was remanded in custody until Aug. 20 for a pre-sentence report after Judge Blake Allan found him guilty of indecent assault and breaking and entering.

John Peter Johnson, of 245 Wilson, was found guilty following a day-long trial Friday. Allan ordered a ban on publication of evidence given by the victim, including her name, address and circumstances surrounding the incident.

Ostler sentenced an 18-year-old youth to 14 days in jail for stealing goods from a convertible July 19.

Alex Mandap, of 3258 Glasgow, pleaded guilty to theft under $200 in connection with a tape deck, 10 tapes, a baseball glove and a console cover taken from a vehicle parked in an apartment lot.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said a tennant saw Mandap moving about the convertible that night and recognized him. When Saanich police went to Mandap's residence the next day, he initially denied any knowledge of the theft but eventually admitted it and led the officers to his room where the goods were kept.

"You were convicted of the same thing last year, weren't you?" asked Ostler, referring to an April 3, 1978 conviction for which Mandap was fined $200.

"Yes," the youth replied.

"It doesn't seem to have had much effect on you," the judge observed before passing sentence.

20-year terms to traffickers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two leaders of a cocaine trafficking ring which brought the drug to Canada from South America were sentenced Friday to 20 years in prison and fined $50,000 each.

Mr. Justice Thomas Berger of British Columbia Supreme Court, who described the ring as the most extensive cocaine-trafficking conspiracy in Canadian history, said the pair, William Faulder (Fats) Robertson, 49, and Ido Paul Zamai, 45, were even prepared to kill those who cheated the organization.

Robertson and Zamai, among nine convicted in the case, were sentenced to an additional three years each if they default on the fines.

Justice Berger handed down 14-year terms to Richard Henry Bengert, 37, Steve Ponak, 49, Frank Raymond Ferron, 42, and Brian Robert Jeffries, 32.

George William Layman, 29, and William Allan Perry, 35, were given eight years and John Edward Dupuis was given four years.

The judge said the group had imported cocaine between the fall of 1976 and December, 1977.

The last shipment, seized by RCMP in December, 1977, was the largest amount of cocaine ever intercepted by Canadian police to that date. The haul of nearly nine kilograms had an estimated street value of $3.5 million.

Justice Berger rejected a plea from the Crown counsel, Howard Rubin, for life terms.

When you live on an island, ferries become the veins that carry the lifeblood of your wanderlust to other less isolated parts of the world.

For us it is nearly always B.C. Ferries, our government's proud contribution to the waterways; biggest, fastest, cleanest and, in fact, everythingest ferry fleet in the world. It is nearly always our choice, but it doesn't have to be.

There is an alternative and, for the first time in almost 11 years of living in Canada, the other day we thought we'd give it a whirl.

And so, with our sights set on Vancouver, instead of heading out the familiar way to Swartz Bay, we beetled up to Nanaimo to catch the CP Rail ferry Princess of Vancouver. Okay, that's an hour and-a-half drive from Victoria but once you dock you're right downtown and don't have to face the long drive in from Tsawwassen.

There are other advantages, too.

At a time of year when ferry lineups are not only commonplace but part of life at Tsawwassen and Swartz Bay, it's nice to know you can book a space for your car or recreational vehicle aboard the Princess of Vancouver.

As we were being met in downtown Vancouver and didn't need a car, we parked at the dock in Nanaimo (there is no charge) and walked on board. Sailings from Nanaimo every day are at 8 a.m., 4 p.m. and midnight and from Vancouver at 4 a.m., noon and 8 p.m.

It costs $12.50 to take a car and $17 for a recreational vehicle over on the two and-a-half-hour crossing. But there is a real break on passenger fares — providing you know the right time to go.

We forked out $5 for each adult and $2.50 for each of three children under 12 — a total of $17.50 one way as foot passengers — only to learn that if we'd gone on a Saturday or Sunday the bill would have been a mere $6!

This seems a little strange when you remember that B.C. Ferries offered a reduced passenger fare on midweek days during the winter to encourage passengers to travel when it wasn't busy. (Present B.C. Ferries rates between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen, incidentally, are $12 for a car and driver, $3 for each adult passenger and $1.50 for each child. And there are no return tickets, though CP Rail offers a one-day $6 return ticket).

Does this mean the CP Rail ferry is quieter on weekends, I pondered as we skipped peacefully over the waves.

"No, Sir," an officer told me over a cup of coffee in the cafeteria. "The weekends are our busiest time. But midweek we carry trains and huge commercial transport trailers on the lower deck and have only enough room for about 30 or so cars each crossing. And so we make it more attractive for them to travel on this ferry on weekends when we can carry around 150 cars and 750 passengers."

And the officer grinned.

"We can't compete with them (B.C. Ferries) anyway because they don't have to show a profit and we do," he pointed out. "They can run up a $60 million annual deficit, being a government-run service, but if we didn't show a profit, we wouldn't have a job."

Anyway, with fares like $3 for an adult each way and children under 12 free on both Saturdays and Sundays, it sure makes it attractive to go that way on weekends.

There are advantages, such as the fact it berths at the foot of Burrard Street and a short stroll takes you right to the heart of things; such as the licensed Princess Room for those so inclined, and other attractions not quite so tangible.

Then there's the marvellous old boat itself, a sharp contrast to the smart new Swedish ferries running between Nanaimo and Horseshoe Bay.

Built in 1955, she reminded me of the S.S. Mataroa, in which our family emigrated from England to New Zealand in the late 1940s. Already 30 or-so years old then, the Mataroa struggled somewhat on that crossing and was scrapped soon afterward.

But, with things like an eight-foot-square canvas bag strung up on deck and filled with sea water to serve as a swimming pool, what a marvellous old boat she was for a small kid to explore.

The Princess of Vancouver's wide decks where you can stroll or sit in aging furniture and soak up the sun are just like the Mataroa's were and the same wonderful smells of being at sea aboard something old are there, too.

Alas, though, it would seem today that kids have lost the urge to explore when a small boy, faced with all this, merely laments the lack of those somewhat garish game machines installed on some of the B.C. Ferries' boats.

If you don't mind a certain grubbiness and aren't shocked when you stick occasionally to either the table or seats, or maybe to both, in the cafeteria, then you'll find an air of nautical decadence aboard the Princess of Vancouver and with it a charm you won't get aboard a modern liner. It's something akin to sitting in a cane chair sipping tall, cool drinks at Raffles Hotel in Singapore.

But I think the biggest bonus you get from making this crossing is the glorious approach to, and departure from, Vancouver Harbor.

Compared with sailing up to a pile of coal in Tsawwassen, you glide through a myriad of tiny sailboats, past Stanley Park, under the majestic Lions Gate Bridge, make a swift turn to the right and you're there.

That makes all the difference . . .

Capt. John Horne guides another in Pilots work long hours but are own bosses

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

Many onshore watchers seeing the Victoria pilot boat head out to yet another foreign ship entering our waters are unaware the most important man aboard is not a civil servant but a free-enterpriser.

He's the pilot, one of 90 who belong to The British Columbia Coast Pilots Ltd.

The pilots formed their own company in 1973 after the federal government offered them the option of becoming civil servants with the Pacific Pilotage Authority or forming their own association.

The pilots opted to form their own company and contract their services to the PPA.

Capt. John Horne, 637 Beach Drive, is one of five directors who operate the company. There is no paid staff.

He became a pilot in 1964 after serving with commercial shipping companies, finally being second top man in the B.C. Ferries' fleet.

He explains all pilots in B.C. belong to the company with the exception of eight who work on the Fraser River. There, he says, marine traffic fluctuates so much that it was to the advantage of the river pilots to become civil servants with a guaranteed pay cheque.

A coastal pilot's earnings are good — about the same as the pilot of an Air Canada DC9 pilot. But, Horne says, a pilot's career lasts an average of 20 years and by that time it is too late to start another marine career.

"After being second top man with B.C. Ferries it would be too tough to start at the bottom directing cars," he says.

Horne says each pilot gets three months of holidays a year but this is only made possible by working very long hours over long periods of time without weekends or statuatory holidays.

Christmas for pilots' families such as Horne's is often celebrated the closest calendar day that the pilot can be home. Horne has been home for Christmas Day only seven times during his 37 years of seatime.

Pilots get three hours' notice of their next assignment from PPA despatchers and must be prepared to leave at any hour of the day or night. They could be gone for three or four days to Tasu in the Queen Charlotte Islands or for only two hours, just long enough to shift a grain ship from one elevator to another.

Every day at 5 p.m. PPA despatchers phone the pilots to give them arrival times of vessels expected to need pilots before 6 a.m. the following day.

"Nobody is allowed to use the phone in a pilot's house between 5 and 5:30 p.m.," Horne reports.

Pilots are stationed in Victoria, Vancouver and Nanaimo, each station being divided into three groups. They work in 120-day cycles, being on duty 24 hours per day for 21 consecutive days, followed by a six-day rest. This is repeated for three periods and then they have a month off.

On the law of averages a pilot has an eleven-hour workday during the 21-day stints and in peak summer periods may work as much as 15 or 16 hours a day.

Having passed difficult and highly technical examinations in order to become certified pilots, they must continue to hone their skills. Each year some of them attend the Marine Research and Training Centre at Port Revel in France.

About 17 per cent of the revenue gained by the pilots' company goes toward a pension fund. Pilots can expent to get a pension equal to 35 per cent of their final income which is not indexed for cost of living and inflation.

One of the side benefits of being a pilot, Horne says, is the friendships that are struck between pilots and masters of vessels from such countries as Norway, Germany, Holland, Britain, Fiji and Australia.

Horne tells of the time he and his wife were on holiday in Norway. They were walking along a street in Bergen when one of the ship's captains he had met during his piloting career spotted them from across the street.

"He had retired by then and insisted we stay in his home for a week and go cruising on his yacht."

A frequent dinner guest at the Hornes' home, as another example, is the master of the Pacific Princess, known as The Love Ship to television viewers.

Ties tend to become close between the free-enterprising pilots themselves. President of The British Coastal Pilots Ltd, Jack Macauley, and secretary Lou McKay trace their friendship back 40 years whem they were both serving aboard an Imperial Oil tanker.

Piloting tends to be a family thing too. Horne says there are five sets of brothers in the organization and Vancouver-based pilot John McNeill is a fourth-generation pilot. His cousin, Mac Unwin of Victoria, is also a pilot.

Once the pilots retire they are not forgotten by their former co-workers and business partners. Horne says parties, alternatively held in Victoria and Vancover, are held to honor retired pilots. There were 120 pilots, former pilots and their wives at the last get-together held in Victoria. One of them was John Park, 97, who retired in the 1940s and now lives in Vancouver.

Munro ignores N-issue: NDP

Esquimalt-Saanich MP Donald Munro is ignoring Canadian concerns over a proposed nuclear power plant at Sedro Woolley, about 50 miles south of the B.C. border, Gordon Hanson, NDP MLA for Victoria, charged today.

Hanson said he and three other NDP MLA's wrote a letter to Prime Minister Clark urging him to press the United States government to refer the Sedro Woolley issue to the Joint International Commission.

Out of courtesy, a copy of the letter was sent to Munro, he said.

"Instead of Munro making some contribution toward resolving this matter, all we got was a hysterical diatribe attacking the NDP," Hanson said.

"All we asked for was official Canadian representation in this matter," he added. "Is there anthing emotional about that? After all, Vancouver is in the evacuation zone if an accident should happen. Also, the plant is to be constructed on two seismic faults."

Munro accused the four MLAs of conducting an emotional campaign against the nuclear plant.

"Until you reach that level of comprehension that will tell you that government should rest on reason rather than impassioned rhetoric, may the people of British Columbia be spared from the likes of you."

Guest to play carillon

A guest carillonneur from Holland will give a recital at the Netherlands Carillon, Heritage Court, Wednesday, Aug. 8 at noon.

Joop de Lange, 54, city carillonneur of Geldrop and Helmond, will play some popular Dutch folk songs, negro spirituals, pieces by Bach and Handel and romantic music.

The concert will also feature Suite for Carillon by Wouter Paap; Theme with Variations, Staf Nees; Yerushala's Shel Zahav, Naomi Shemer; and Trumpet Voluntary, Jer. Clarke.

The visitor is a graduate of the Netherlands Carillon School, Amersfoort, and a member of the board of the Netherlands Guild of Carillonneurs.

44-ft cruiser burns in fuel-dock blaze

A $150,000 luxury cabin cruiser was destroyed and the refueling dock at Galiano Island's Montague Harbor severely damaged in a fire Friday afternoon.

The 44-foot Sea Sprite, owned by J.H. Buttonhof of Toutle, Wash., was tied to the dock when the explosion and fire occurred at about 3.30 p.m.

Buttonhof and an unidentified companion escaped injury.

Craig Dougans, coxswain in charge of the Ganges summer Canadian Coast Guard depot, which helped fight the fire, says minor damage was inflicted on three other vessels.

The fire was fought by the Montague Harbor volunteer fire department from the land side while Dougans and another crew member tackled it from the sea side in the coast guard's inflatable craft.

The gas pumps on the dock were destroyed and fire chief Chester Wulliams said the damage would have been much greater if marina owner Rick Coulter had not been quick to cut off supplies to the pumps on the floating dock.

Dougans said it took some time before the fire could be brought sufficiently under control to allow the vessel to be cut loose and towed to a small deserted bay at nearby Parker Island.

He said they continued to fight the fire until 4:54 p.m. when the vessel sank.

The fire was one of three that kept firemen busy on Friday.

In Saanich, an estimated damage of $10,000 was done when a fire broke out in a back bedroom of a home at 1006 Karen.

A fire department spokesman said owner George Bridges was working in his front yard when he heard a noise inside the house and then noticed the smoke.

Earlier on Friday in Saanich, a B.C. Hydro transformer on a power pole at the corner of Mount Douglas Cross Road and Blenkinsop exploded and set fire to nearby dry grass, cutting off power in a limited area for a while.

So far, four people have died on this Esquimalt Road bend

A block with a deadly record

Suicide corner. Misery row. Call it what you will. The 800-block Esquimalt Road has acquired a notorious reputation.

There are so many traffic accidents in the block, especially on the curve where Dominion and Dunsmiur streets join into the main road, that Esquimalt police now go there almost instinctively whenever they get a report of a crash in their 2.2 square-mile municipality.

"When the dispatcher says 'Accident, 800-block,' we drop everything and run because it generally means it's serious," said one veteran officer.

Over the past four years, four people have died in mishaps in the block, the most recent on June 4 when a 21-year-old servicemen, Michael Stanley Plul, was killed after his motorcycle smashed into a utility pole. On March 2, 1977, Michael Wade Gus, 17, died when the car he was riding in struck a pole. And two Esquimalt teenagers, Debra Ann McLeod, 18, and Cynthia Campbell, 17, lost their lives on May 31, 1975 in yet another car-pole mishap.

So far this year there have been at least 33 accidents in the block, the vast majority at the treacherous Dominion Street curve.

Half were relatively minor, but a third resulted in injuries, including the fatality. This week two accidents sent half a dozen people to hospital with various injuries, none serious. In one of the mishaps a telephone pole was severed. It was the third time this year B.C. Tel has had to replace a pole there.

The property damage over the years is beyond reckoning.

Statistics kept by the Esquimalt engineering branch show about 40 per cent of all accidents on Esquimalt Road occur in the 800-block. The road is the main arterial route through the municipality linking Vic West with the Armed Forces base, a distance of about three kilometres.

The number of accidents in that stretch of road has remained fairly constant over the years: 56 in 1975, 50 in 1976, 52 in 1977, and 57 last year.

Esquimalt police chief Art Burton says the high incident of accidents in the block is a matter of continuing concern to his department.

But he feels it's not the fault of the road. "In just about every case it's speed and/or booze that's to blame."

He says the road is well-marked and signed. At the eastern approach to the block there's a curve sign with a Block Parent poster incongruously affixed on top. Ten metres further down the road is a 50 km/h speed sign. For motorists travelling the other way, heading into Victoria, there's another curve sign and a warning to go slow.

Burton doesn't know why the Dominion Street curve should be so bad. Years ago the big trouble-spot was the bend in the road between Head and Lampson.

"For some unknown reason, it's moved further down the road," he says.

Burton says most of the drivers who pile up at the curve aren't strangers to travelling the road.

It's a case of familiarity breeding contempt.

"They think they can take the curve at a speed faster than they can. They go into a skid, over-correct and lose control," he says.

Engineers say the curve is completely safe at the posted speed. Burton says he's taken it safely as fast as 100 km/h responding to emergency calls. But he doesn't recommend others try.

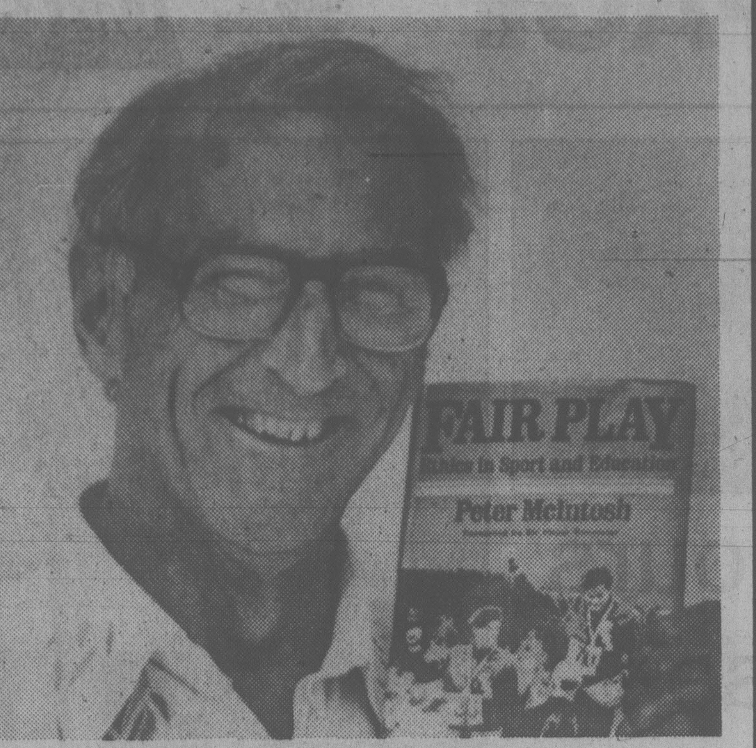
Mayor Art Young says engineers have been studying the problems for years but there is apparently little that can be done. It would be too costly to widen the road, and replacing the poles with an underground wiring system isn't seen as an answer.

As one officer said: "I couldn't tell the number of times the poles have actually saved lives and limited the amount of damage that could have been done."

He noted one car that went off the road and missed hitting a pole nearly ended up in the middle of a nearby restaurant.

Neither would more signs or flashing lights warning motorists of the danger be a solution, police feel.

"We tried that at Lyall and Lampson," Burton said. "The works crew had just installed the light and were standing back admiring their handywork when a guy came through the red light and piled into another car."



PETER McINTOSH...'children don't cheat until taught by adults'

Pressure of winning increases cheating

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

If the late Vince Lombardi was right, it's okay to cheat.

Lombardi, who built Green Bay Packers into a National Football League dynasty in the mid-1960s, was the man who is supposed to have said that winning isn't everything, it's the only thing.

Peter McIntosh is no Vince Lombardi. He's a highly qualified teacher, authority on sport and education, and author of a new book on sports and ethics, Fair Play, the first edition of which was published in London in March.

The 63-year-old resident of Leatherhead, Surrey — five miles from the site of the famed Epsom Derby — is a visiting professor this summer at the University of Victoria.

"If winning is the only thing," McIntosh reasoned, "then fair play becomes anything officials allow or fail to see."

McIntosh holds some impressive credentials. He has a degree in philosophy from Oxford University, served for 15 years as senior inspector of physical education in London, was deputy director of physical education at the University of Birmingham, taught four years at the national school of physical education, Otago University, New Zealand, and is a former member of the British Sports Council, the U.K. government advisory board.

* * *

"I've become aware of double standards in sports — teachers and coaches saying one thing and doing another," he said. "They pay lip service to sportsmanship but they psych up their players to bash an opponent and take him out of the game."

McIntosh doesn't agree with Lombardi's philosophy, although he admits the former Packer coach at least avoided hypocricy.

McIntosh defines fair play as "having your own standard of behaviour irrespective of what a referee does or does not allow, or can or cannot see."

He admits, though, that cheating is becoming more common.

"It's increasing because of the rising levels of performance necessary for success. There's a psychological tendency to cut corners because of this pressure.

"Take the discus or javelin thrower. He can't win without using steroids. The level of performance has become so high he cannot succeed without resorting to forbidden methods."

Cheating is also nurtured by inadequate penalties.

In hockey, McIntosh said, a five-minute penalty for physically assaulting on opponent is no penalty at all. To him, that sort of thing calls for banishment, game suspensions and loss of income.

It's doubtful that hockey will crack down as long as paying customers and the media condone and encourage violence. But McIntosh believes that sports governing bodies are moving in that direction.

"In the Rugby Football Union (in Britain) in the last five years a tremendous number of players have been sent off the field for violations," he pointed out. "Now the governing body has said that no player sent off may represent England in international matches — an indication it is becoming aware of cheating and violence and is increasing the penalty to fit the crime."

* * *

McIntosh also hopes athletes themselves will blow the whistle.

In the meantime, he says, there are two ways to curb rule-breakers.

The first is to use more game officials and impose stricter penalties.

The second is to eliminate officials altogether.

Ridiculous? Not at all, McIntosh argues.

"In football 100 years ago there were no officials and there were no penalties. If a player consistently broke the rules his own captain sent him off. If you wanted to play the game, you had to observe the rules.

"Immorality and rule breaking greatly increase when you have officials. Without them, the players must have inner control. This is still the case in sports like squash or pickup team games.

"The ideals of fair play are not being kept alive in the stadiums but on the sandlots. It's on the sandlots — without an official telling them what and what not to do — that kids' ideas of justice are given expression."

In youth sports, McIntosh said, "the two real sinners are coaches and hockey mothers. Their behaviour can be positively appalling in the things they're encouraging little kids to do.

"The rules of fair play will be kept alive by the kids when the adults are not involved. Very young children do not cheat. They have violent arguments, but they do not cheat.

"Cheating comes later, when they're taught by adults."

Pirates enjoy a good night while Expos win and worry

By The Canadian Press

Dave Parker knew it was the Pirates' night the first time he stepped up to the plate, struck out, was booed and didn't mind.

Instead of venting his anger at the reaction of the 45,309 fans in Three Rivers Stadium, the largest turnout at a Pirates game this season, Parker bore down. He went 3-for-4, including a three-run homer that won the first game of Pittsburgh's twi-night doubleheader sweep of the Phillies, 6-3 and 5-1 Friday.

Jim Bibby pitched a five-hitter in the National League baseball nightcap.

"I hear them all the time but that's the fans perogative," said Parker, the league's most valuable player in 1978. "They pay their money to come here and they have the right to boo. I go out and do my job.

"Frankly, I have been accustomed to playing in front of small crowds in this city and it's nice to have them out regardless of what they say."

Willie Stargell also homered for Pittsburgh and Mike Schmidt had his 38th home run, tops in the majors, for the Phils.

The sweep brought Pittsburgh to 1½ games behind first-place Montreal.

The Expos did their job by socking New York Mets 10-6.

Elsewhere in the NL, Houston beat Atlanta 4-1, Los Angeles rocked San Francisco 11-3, St. Louis topped Chicago 4-2 and San Diego bested Cincinnati 6-4.

In the American League, Seattle Mariners' pitcher Floyd Bannister, who now has six wins at the indoor Kingdome, and 13 consecutive losses everwhere else, led the Mariners to a 1-0 defeat of Oakland A's.

In other AL games, Baltimore Orioles nipped New York Yankees 1-0, Milwaukee Brewers defeated Boston Red Sox 5-3, Minnesota Twins downed California Angels 4-1, Texas Rangers beat Cleveland Indians 8-3, Chicago White Sox topped Toronto Blue Jays 8-5 and Detroit Tigers beat Kansas City Royals 4-3 after losing 5-3 in the opener of their twi-night doubleheader.

Victory in Montreal carried its usual sweetness for the Expos but only time will tell whether they will have to pay the price.

True, the front-running Expos rebounded from a 5-0 first-inning deficit but most of the heroics came long after ace pitcher Steve Rogers retired to the trainer's room.

Rogers left the game after three innings with a twinge in his right elbow, where he had off-season surgery to remove a bone spur, and even he is unaware of the gravity of the injury.

"It's just wait and see right now," said Montreal's 10-game winner. "I don't think it's serious."

A job done in Earnest

Youth is nice but on Friday, Aug. 3, Longview Boondox fared best with experience.

Gary Earnest, who has been doing it for more than two decades, was the stopper as the Washington state squad nipped Victoria Budgets 1-0 to salvage a split in their Northwest Men's Fastball League doubleheader at Royal Athletic Park.

Budgets won the opener, 5-0, behind the four-hit pitching of Dave Wilson and the batting contributions of John Green and Sonny Phillips.

Perhaps not quite as fast as in his prime, Earnest relied control, placement and a good changeup to handcuff the Pan-American Games champions. Budgets managed only four hits, including two by Alden Govenlock, as Earnest had Victoria batters off guard most of the game.

Easy popups, a good indication, took care of 14 of the 21 Victoria outs.

Wilson, always in command, struck out 10 while Phillips and Green took care of the support. Phillips connected for a solo homer while Green drove in the other four runs with a single and three-run round-tripper.

Budgets continue a busy weekend by facing Seattle Peterbilt, the league leaders, tonight. Yakima Pepsis visit Sunday and Abbotsford winds up the eight-game weekend with a Monday doubleheader.

Drillers fall in shootout

By Canadian Press

Edmonton Drillers rallied from a 3-1 deficit to tie the score but Ian Anderson's goal on Houston's fifth shootout attempt gave the Hurricane a 4-3 victory at Edmonton in North American Soccer League play Friday.

Drillers Lex Schoenmaker and Lorenz Hilkes tied the score with 10 minutes remaining to force the game into overtime before a hometown crowd of 8,394, but the Drillers missed a half-dozen excellent opportunities in the 15-minute sudden-death session.

In the only other NASL game Friday, Dallas Tornado handed Tampa Bay Rowdies a 2-1 defeat.

TORONTO (CP) — Bermuda upset England South and Ireland defeated the Netherlands in semi-final play Friday to advance to the final of an international youth cricket tournament.

Chances best for Ruth clubs

Four Victoria-area teams clung to title hopes as British Columbia minor baseball championships continued to wind down.

Victoria Firefighters and Saanich Evening Optimists, both Babe Ruth hopefuls, maintain the brightest aspirations while Victoria Carnarvons, the defending provincial Pony League champs, and Gordon Head Cosmos, another Babe Ruth contender, remain in the running.

Clay Bertoia and Dale Schmidt combined to drive in nine runs as Firefighters routed North Vancouver 19-0 in the Senior Babe Ruth showdown at Powell River.

Backing Mike Bull's sparkling, one-hit pitching, Bertoia cranked out two home runs to drive in four runs while Schmidt drove in five. Brian Martin also homered as Firefighters scored their second victory.

In other action, host Powell River bounced Nanaimo from contention with a 5-3 victory while Coquitlam eliminated Prince George, 6-5, and Trail blanked Vancouver East 8-0.

Saanich edged Prince George 7-6 Friday morning, in a game carried over from the previous night, and was in position to make it two straight this morning in the 13-year-old Babe Ruth showdown at Reynolds Park.

Optimists led Vancouver Inter-Community 6-0 in a game called Friday because of darkness. It was to be resumed this morning.

In other games, Gordon Head Cosmos, rebounding from a first-round loss, belted North Vancouver 14-8, Coquitlam eliminated Prince George 13-12 and Trail outlasted Duncan 21-16.

At Castlegar, South Burnaby struck for five runs in the fifth to drop Carnarvon from the winners' bracket in the Pony playoffs, 7-4. Carnarvon, held to five hits by Steve Agostino, faced host Castlegar today.

Anthony Bertoia, Clay's brother, and Peter Gupples homered for Carnarvon while Jamie McIntosh, the first of three Victoria pitchers, absorbed the loss.

At Prince George, Victoria Drive of Vancouver forced a deciding game, which was to be played today, in the B.C. Little League championships by scoring a 5-2 win over Vancouver Dunbar.

Bike berths for Willocks

Brothers Bernie and Martin Willock of Victoria are the only British Columbia residents named to the six-member Canadian team going to compete in the world bicycle road race championship later this month in Holland.

The balance of the squad is made up of cyclists from eastern Canada.

Bernie and Martin finished third and fourth, respectively, in the recent Canadian championship race.

Ben leads by one

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw, Tom Watson and Jerry Pate said there will be no super sub-par rounds in the 61st ProfessionaL Golfers' Association championship today or Sunday — but four-time winner Jack Nicklaus disagreed.

"Oakland Hills has never played easier," said Nicklaus Friday after his 145 just made the cut. "I'm saying a 65 or 66 can be shot. I just haven't done it."

Crenshaw, 27, one-stroke leader with a 69-67—136, does not think it unreasonable that someone will assemble four sub-par rounds on the the 7,014-yard, par-70 course that Ben Hogan dubbed The Monster.

"The course is playing soft," Crenshaw said. "You can hit almost any club to the green and it will stop. The fairways are soft too; balls are not rolling off the fairways, are not falling off the greens."

The field of 150, cut to 74 by those firing 146 or less on Thursday and Friday, came knowing that no one has broken par 280 during a four-day major tournament.

Watson and Pate, two strokes behind, stuck with their prediction that the 1979 PGA champion would come in two or three under.

"The course is playing easier than ever for a major championship because of the soft greens and fairways," said Watson, who shot 66 and 72.

Pate, with consecutive 69s, said: "No one is going to break loose the next two days. In the U.S. Open and the PGA, the scores come right back down. The scores kind of hang around par. You think about winning it so much, the pressure puts you right back to par."

Alan Tapie, 30, equalled the course record — set in 1964 by George Archer — with a five-under 65 to lead 17 others shooting sub-par rounds, and tied with Watson, Pate and Barry Lietzke at 138.

Adanacs second

VANCOUVER — Coquitlam Adanacs slipped into second place in the final game of the Western Lacrosse Association regular season, nipping Vancouver Burrards 13-11 Friday.

The win gave Coquitlam 35 points, the same as New Westminster Salmonbellies. However the Adanacs get second place, and will face fourth-place Vancouver in the semi-finals, on the basis of a winning record against the Salmonbellies this season.

New Westminster now faces first-place Victoria Shamrocks in the other semi-final series, scheduled to open Wednesday at Victoria's Memorial Arena.

Dan Wilson, Mark Valastin, Jim Aitchison and Wayne McAuley each scored two goals for Coquitlam.

Leading Vancouver were Ron Pinder with three goals, Stuart Aird and Pat Ryan with two apiece.

Water-skiers unhappy

By GARY KINGSTON

RICHMOND (CP) — Controversy swirled around the muddy waters of the British Columbia Summer Games water-skiing venue Friday as competitors battled waves, dirty water and officials.

The major controversy centred on the judging committee's decision to alter the schedule because of rough water on the Fraser River.

The slalom event was shifted to the afternoon and trick skiing was run almost four hours ahead of its original starting time, causing 13 of 25 skiers to miss the event.

Rick Carrick of Vancouver protested the decision but the judging committee ruled it had the right to change the schedule because of water conditions. It also ruled that all entrants should have been at the site first thing in the morning.

"I showed up at 12 o'clock, four hours before I was supposed to ski," said Carrick.

"What am I supposed to do — wake my wife and kid up at six in the morning and bring them out to this lousy site? I can't be here every minute just in case there's a change."

Chief judge Gary Schan said the rough water Friday was only another in a long list of problems for organizers.

"You can't put a site together in eight days," he said. "In fact, we came out here last night (Thursday) to chop down some trees so the spectators could see what was going on."

The competion was moved three times, the first after a logging company decided not to clear log booms from a slough. When the site was finally set, organizers found out that the harbor commission would not let them lay out the course until Thursday morning.

Meanwhile, seven gold medals were awarded in track and field, two in wheelchair sports and four each in synchronized and regular swimming Friday during the first day of competition.

Friday's results:

New timing system

CALGARY (CP) — A horse-race timing system described as the first computer-controlled system in North America began operating at Stampede Park this week.

It features 13 timing stations around the track's inner rail, said a representative of Mendelson Films, the installer.

Infra-red beams, which detect the passing of a horse, are used at each station.

Nina trips Wendy, then loses

Nina Bland fashioned a surprise in women's singles Friday at the Canadian tennis championships and then was bounced out of the running in semi-finals.

In a marathon, quarter-final duel between Victoria players, Bland made her steady baseline play pay off for a 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 triumph over second-seeded Wendy Barlow, winner of the Ontario title last weekend.

Bland was ousted in the semis, losing a 7-5, 7-5 battle to Toronto's Lisa Senn, who faced defending-champion Marjorie Blackwood of Ottawa in today's finals.

Blackwood advanced with a 7-5, 6-0 conquest of Nicole Marois of Quebec City.

Dale Power of Ottawa upset defending men's champion Harry Fritz of Toronto 6-3, 6-4 to gain a berth in the men's singles final against Toronto's Derek Segal, a 6-4, 6-0 winner over Martin Wostenholme of Ottawa.

In doubles' finals, Barlow and Karen Lewis of London, Ont., face Blackwood and Senn while Nick Mohtadi and Paul O'Donoghue of Calgary meet Ottawa's Power and James Boyce.

Rutledge nabs share of lead

REGINA (CP) — Jim Rutledge, a 19-year-old professional from Victoria, fired a four-under-par 68 Friday to grab a share of first place after two rounds of play in the Saskatchewan Open golf tournament.

Rutledge had a 36-hole total of 138, which tied him with another Victorian, opening-round-leader Bob Beauchemin, who posted a one-under-par 71 Friday.

In third place is defending-champion Roger Klatt of St. Albert, Alta., whose second-round 69 gave him a 139 total going into today's final round.

Rutledge's 68, the low round of the day, came with four birdies and no bogies over the 6,400-yard Wascana Country Club course. Only seven players in the field of 84 professionals and amateurs were able to better the par 72 rating.

Early starters were forced to suspend play for more than an hour when torrential rains rendered the course temporarily unplayable.

Dan Halldorson, a regular on the U.S. pro tour and the winner of the Saskatchewan open in 1977 the last time it was played at the Wascana course, had a 145 total after two rounds, finishing the second day with a two-under 70. Halldorson is in fifth place and Jerry Anderson, the winner of last week's Manitoba open, holds down fourth place with a 140 total. Anderson shot a 69 Friday.

The professionsals are playing for a total of $15,000 in prize money in the 54 hole event, with the winner taking home $4,000.

SKATER OF YEAR

Kathy Finch, Ruth Fouts, Doreen Jarvis and Jan Hall of Vancouver South defeated Oak Bay's Madge Martell, Evelyn Leahey, May Down and Mabel Wilson in the rinks final.

Marie Sage and Joan Farnham of Burnside topped clubmates Jean Chandler and Emily Clegg 26-3 in the pairs final while the host club's combination of Vee Hewins, Dorothy Johnson and Olive Southwell won the triples, stopping Victoria West's Vilsie Wright, Peggy Keating and Christie Forbes 16-13 in the final.

Satin Satan slick as new silk

The standardbred racing spotlight at Sandown Park lingered longest on a pair of drivers and two horses Friday.

Satin Satan, with Keith Linton in the sulky, and Governor's Star Boy, driven by the cast-wearing Joe Hudon, scored the notable victories on the harness card.

Satin Satan, which made his Vancouver Island debut the previous week with an impressive (2:03 for the mile) victory, made it two straight. Stepping up in class, Satin Satan won the eighth race by holding off the late-charging Holdrige Elaine. The time was 2:04.

Now established as a strong favorite with the bettors, Governor's Star Boy went wire-to-wire to win the sixth race. It was the ninth victory in 10 Sandown starts for Governor's Star Boy, one short of the one-season victory record set by Dobbie Joe last year.

Linton's victory with Satin Satan was his third of the evening and his 66th of the meet. Bidding to become the first Western Canada driver to win 300 races in a single season, Linton also connected with Bee Bee Brook in the second and Dusty's Monarch in the seventh.

Linton also had a second and a third-place finish to boost his Universal Driver Rating percentage to .426.

Still, he lost ground to Hudon. who suffered a broken leg earlier in the meet and has been driving with a cast since returning to work. Hudon, who has 20 victories in 71 starts, pushed his UDR percentage to .424.

Away from the track, the news wasn't too good for Bob Boyd. Injured when Master Charge went down in the eighth race Thursday, Boyd learned Friday that he suffered a fractured elbow and will probably be sidelined for the balance of the meet.

A dead heat in the fifth set up a double payoff for a crowd of 1,207. Pegassus Becky and Ensign Win hit the wire together.

Bookies know when to quit

SUNNINGDALE, England (AP) — British bookies quit taking bets today on on Nancy Lopez to win the Women's European golf championship.

The 22-year-old black-haired superstar from New Mexico was 11-under-par (68-69 — 137) and three strokes ahead after two rounds. The Sunningdale course is playing slow after torrential rains, and Lopez is out driving every other woman in the field.

"She's about 20 yards stronger off the tee than most others," said Joyce Kazmierski of Williston, Fla., who was second with a 140 total.

Lopez, going for a first prize of $16,500, modestly admitted she is now the strongest driver on the women's tour.

"I wouldn't have said that last year," she said. "I'd have put myself among the first four or five. But I'm driving the ball 20 or 25 yards farther this season."

The rain made Friday a long day. Lopez was on the course for more than five hours, including 30 minutes at midday when play was suspended because of flooded greens

"It lasted forever," Lopez said. "After so long, and in these difficult conditions, you just can't concentrate as well."

But at the end of her tough round, she biried the last three holes. On the soggy 17th and 18th greens she hit on putts from 10 feet.

Kessinger on Chisox list

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago White Sox placed Don Kessinger on the restricted list Friday, one day after his resignation as player-manager, and he returned to his Memphis, Tenn., home to ponder his future.

While on the restricted list, Kessinger can be reactivated at any time by the White Sox, but no other baseball team can claim him, a spokesman for the American League team said.

Kessinger, 37, resigned Thursday in his first season as manager.

Kamloops mill reopens after four-day strike

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The strike at Weyerhaeuser Canada Ltd.'s pulp mill in this Interior city ended Thursday night and the plant is back in operation.

Union representatives of the 465-member Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada Local 10, and company negotiators reached a tentative agreement Thursday in a five-hour meeting which ended the four-day strike.

The agreement tentatively resolves all outstanding issues pending a review and re-evaluation of several job descriptions including the job description and wage rate for mobile equipment operators, said union spokesman Richard Baker.

Production at the mill halted Monday when 30 equipment operators set up picket lines after discovering that pay rates for operators at other PPWC mills in B.C. were higher than those paid at Weyerhaeuser.

The wage rate for mobile equipment operators varies from mill to mill, said an industry spokesman. He said the rates depended upon the job description.

The evaluation may update some of the job descriptions and some of the wages, he added.

Gerry Sauve, Weyerhaeuser's manager of human relations, said that company and union officials will be meeting next Wednesday to discuss the issue.

Once the evaluation has been completed, the membership will hold a second vote on local issues.

New uranium mine rule rapped

VANCOUVER (CP) — A new regulation allowing mining companies to remove small amounts of uranium without federal exploration permits will make it even more difficult for the public to keep track of uranium exploration, a spokesman for the Canadian Coalition for Nuclear Responsibility has charged.

John Moelaert, chairman of the Kelowna branch of the coalition, said the change means the public will no longer have access to Atomic Energy Control Board lists of companies holding uranium exploration permits.

"The federal government, like the government of B.C., is showing increasing subservience to the nuclear industry," Moelaert said.

"People are deliberately kept in the dark about uranium exploration activities by the mining industry and the federal and provincial governments."

Moelaert was referring to an Atomic Energy Control Board directive informing mining companies that they will no longer have to obtain surface exploration permits if they are removing less than 10 kilograms of uranium from a deposit a year.

John Beare, director of the AECB's safeguards and nuclear materials branch, said in a telephone interview from Ottawa this week that the permit system only meant that companies involved in uranium exploration had to submit an annual report to the board.

The reports, which enabled the board to monitor the level of activity of the companies, were then passed on the appropriate provincial mines ministries and the federal energy, mines and resources department.

He said regulations eliminating the necessity for the permits for small amounts of uranium have actually been in place since 1974, but weren't implemented because the energy, mines and resources department had no alternative means of getting the information the permits provided.

Penticton must stop using lake for sewage

PENTICTON (CP) — A cabinet committee has upheld an appeal by an environmental group and, as a result, the City of Penticton will have to stop dumping sewage into Skaha Lake, Energy Minister Jim Hewitt said Friday.

The environmental group, No Effluents Wanted, appealed after a Pollution Control Appeals Branch hearing in January resulted in a decision that Penticton could discharge more sewage into the lake.

At a hearing two years ago, the city was granted a daily discharge of 1.8 million gallons a day which was later boosted to three million gallons a day.

Hewitt said Health Minister Bob McClelland said the government upheld the appeal because Skaha Lake, part of the Okanagan Lakes system, is a prime source of drinking water and is also used for recreation.

"The decision also reflects the need to preserve the quality of other lakes in the system and to begin in a major way a thrust to improve the conditions in the Okanagan basin," Hewitt said.

The committee recommends that representatives of the environment ministry meet with the city of Penticton to develop plans for a sewage disposal system to serve as an alternative to water disposal.

Hewitt provided no details on timing or funding, but said provincial government help would probably be available.

Press row settled

COQUITLAM (CP) — A tentative agreement has been reached on a new contract for 200 employees of the Columbian, an evening daily newspaper published here.

No details of the pact were released Friday.

The workers, represented by several unions which negotiate together under the auspices of the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions, earlier rejected an eight-per-cent wage increase in each year of a two-year contract.

The tentative agreement was reached with the aid of mediator Jock Waterston. It was believed a ratification vote is to be held next week.

Refugee centre opens

VANCOUVER (CP) — A refugee coordination centre, funded by the city, opened here Friday to help provide sponsorship, housing and jobs for Vietnamese refugees.

But director David Cox said the centre's volunteer staff will also spend a lot of time debunking myths about refugees.

"We're dealing with a group of refugees that is not necessarily poor," Cox said. "They were almost drowned but a rich man can drown as fast as a poor man, therefore they should be let in.

Ald. Bernice Gerard said the mayor's office has already received about $13,000 in donations to aid refugees.

Strike averted

KELOWNA (CP) — Negotiators for the Teamsters' Union local 213 and Sun-Rype Products Ltd. hammered out a tentative agreement Friday, averting a strike which a company spokesman said would have disastrous implications for this Okanagan community's nearly-ripe peach and plum crop.

Horsefly youth drowns

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — A 15-year-old youth drowned Thursday night while swimming in Quesnel Lake about 80 kilometres west of this Interior community.

RCMP said the victim was Patrick Edward Bowler of Horsefly. He was swimming to a buoy from a dock when he got into difficulty.

Annual medicals urged for clam harvesters

CAMPBELL RIVER (CP) — All divers harvesting the geoduck clam should have an annual medical, a coroner's jury ruled Friday after learning that a diver who drowned May 31 had a serious medical problem.

The jury also made recommendations aimed at aiding divers who run into problems underwater.

The jury was told that Ivan Simon, 26, of this community had been treated for a blood clot between his heart and lungs, but did not tell the skipper of the Queen of Aero about it when he signed up for his first day of commercial diving.

The jury ruled that Simon's death was unnatural and accidental and attached no blame. Both coroner Ken Scott and Crown counsel John Godfrey advised jury members that under the new Coroners Act, they could not blame anyone for the death.

Skipper Ronae Theabeau said Simon's brother told him about the problem.

"I feel that at the time Ivan was taken on, we were not told the truth about his heart and I don't think it was fair for him or any other diver to. . .be on board the vessel if they are not in proper health."

Gen. Leslie dies in Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Retired Brig.-Gen. Edward Leslie, 60, first Canadian chief of staff of the United Nations forces in Cyprus, died in an Ottawa hospital Friday.

Son of the late Gen. Andrew McNaughton, Leslie changed his name in 1952 to meet the conditions of an inheritance from a childless aunt.

Born in Guildford, England, Leslie was educated in Britain, Victoria and Montreal before joining the Canadian army in 1935. He saw active service in the Second World War and the Korean War. While in Korea, he received the distinguished service order.

He later served in a number of staff positions in the Canadian forces, NATO and the UN force in Cyprus. He retired from the forces in 1972.

Later, he was defeated as Liberal candidate in the Ontario riding of Parry Sound-Muskoka in the 1974 federal election. He was appointed director of peacekeeping with the International Peace Academy in New York last year.

He is survived by his wife, the former Helen Claxton, daughter of former Liberal cabinet minister Brooke Claxton, and four children.

Tories oppose pipe

OTTAWA (CP) — Environment Minister John Fraser said Friday the Progressive Conservative government is against construction of an oil pipeline to Edmonton from Kitimat.

The minister said the Conservatives have not changed their stance from before the May 22 federal election.

"We do not look with favor on a Kitimat pipeline."

Under various proposals for a pipeline, Alaskan oil would be taken to Kitimat by ship.

The minister is carrying on with a policy proclaimed first by his predecessor, Liberal environment minister Len Marchand.

Indian fish ruling disputed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Federal fisheries officials denied Friday that a provincial court decision in Lillooet clears the way for Indian management of fish stocks.

Fisheries enforcement officer Tom Moojalsky said the ruling by Judge William Diebolt, in a case involving the Bridge River Indian band, upholds fisheries' right to enforce fishing closures on Indian reserves for conservation purposes.

Louise Mandel, lawyer for the Union of British Columbia Indian Chiefs, had said that Diebolt's decision would allow Indian bands along the Fraser and Nass rivers to pass bylaws to control fishing.

However prosecutor Fred Kaatz, who acted for the fisheries department, said Diebolt's ruling upheld the primacy of the Fisheries Act over the Indian Act, which guarantees Indians exclusive rights to fish.

Diebolt found band member Bradley Bob guilty of violating a fisheries department closure last summer on the Bridge River.

Addition more than doubles size of Saanich Christian School

Step by step, a high school

Although a major addition to the Saanich Christian School at 661 Agnes in Saanich is about half-completed, it is only the first phase of a construction program which will add classrooms for an existing Christian high school to move into.

Syrt Wolters, chairman of the Victoria Christian Education Society, said in an interview that negotiations are just about complete between the elementary board and the Pacific Christian Education Society, operators of the high school, to form a joint board to administer the new facilities.

The high school, which has an enrolment of about 110 students from Grades 8 to 10, has been operating in premises at Oakland School rented from the Greater Victoria School Board.

The current addition will provide extra classrooms for the elementary school, whose enrolment is expected to grow from 106 to close to 200 students (including a kindergarten, new this year) in the fall, and a gymnasium and kitchen facilities for use by both senior and junior students.

This fall the high school will incorporate Grade 11 and next year will offer a full academic program to Grade 12, stressing Christian values and quality in education, Wolters said.

The current addition of 9,000 square feet will cost about $260,000, and the additional 11 classrooms to accommodate the senior high school students are expected to cover about 100,000 square feet and cost about $300,000, he said.

The operators of the school recently purchased some vacant land from Saanich municipality, bringing the total area of the school site to four acres.

Wolters said the two boards—made up mostly of the same people—will probably merge into a new body known as the Victoria Christian Education Society.

Both senior and elementary schools have won broad acceptance from the general public, he said. They are non-denominational and currently draw students from about eight different churches in the Victoria area.

Enrolment fees are a flat $1,140 a year, no matter how many children from the same family attend the school.

Parksville church calls city minister

John D. Francis, team minister of Church of the Way, has been called to establish a growing congregation at Church of the Living Word in Parksville.

Born in New Zealand, Francis has had a varied career including minister for 25 years and representative with a major insurance company.

Francis was asked to be a team minister with the non-denominational charismatic Church of the Way two years ago after a year of Agape Force family-outreach ministry in Texas. His wife Bernice and his 19-year-old son Chuck will work with him in his new post. He also has a married daughter, Grace, residing in Victoria.

The Parksville-Qualicum congregation worships in Island Hall, No. 2 Convention Centre, each Sunday at 7 p.m., catering to tourists and local residents of all denominations.

Because the church has an ample supply of building tradespeople, it is near completion of blueprints for a two stage, 450-seat church and recreation centre on a 4½-acre Island Highway lot. Most of the construction labor will be donated for the 19,000-square-foot structure.

With a history of pioneering and establishing churches, Francis will draw on his experience and the strong link with the sister church in Victoria—one of six on the Island.

The other four are at Duncan, Port Alberni, Campbell River and Nanaimo.

A proponent of the team ministry concept, Francis will endeavor to employ that idea in this North Island community, along with use of the media, drama, visuals, music and dialogue, in a Christ-centred, people-oriented church.

Church of the Way in Victoria, which meets at Royal Oak Inn, has witnessed phenomenal growth in a relatively short period of time under its team ministers of Bill Johns, Doug Roberts, Ted Follows, John Francis, Doug Kooy and Brian Ruud.

Perspectives

By Rev. John A. Davidson

"The Luxury of Integrity": that ironic phrase has been clinched in my mind since I first came across it quite some years ago as the title of an essay by the American economist, Stuart Chase.

Chase suggested that our moral foundations are being so eroded that many of us have come to feel that moral integrity is a luxury we can no longer afford.

He commented on "the art of backslapping in the interest of a profitable sale", and he showed how the frantic quest for the dollar can prostitute hospitality and make a mockery of friendship. He pointed to dishonesty in advertising.

He said that in the grasping bustle of life, compassion is often squashed as we try to manipulate and exploit one another, and he observed that "for the milk of human kindness the most obvious substitute is soft soap." There may be some extravagance in Chase's gloomy diagnosis — but he did make some points which are valid and relevant.

Many of us seem to think that anything goes and that it is wrong only if you get caught at it. A businessman makes, as they say, a big score by shady methods — and many will applaud him for his astuteness. If his methods are exposed and he has to take his lumps he will, of course, be criticized — but often not so much for his crookedness as for his not being astute to keep his methods hidden.

Many of us are losing the capacity and the courage for calling a moral spade a moral spade. We are so afraid of seeming intolerant and moralistic that we tend to give up on authentic moral concern. As someone has said, "Quite often when a man thinks his mind is becoming broader, it is only his conscience stretching."

Yes, for many of us integrity is a luxury we feel we simply can no longer afford. That, of course, is not the whole story of our conduct today. There are still many men and women of firm integrity — honest, merciful, compassionate. And we must recognize that in the complexity of life today moral distinctions are not always as clean-cut as we might like them to be.

In business and in public life today the making of moral decisions and judgments is often terribly difficult, and there are forces in society which erode our integrity without our being aware of what is happening. As Mort Sahl has observed, "Morality is very square these days."

Here is a warning given by the eminent historian, Sir Herbert Butterfield, of Cambridge University: "A civilization may be wrecked without any spectacular crimes or criminals by constant petty breaches of faith and minor complicities on the part of men generally considered very nice people."

Civilization today is menaced by war and threats of war, by political and economic struggles of all shapes and sizes and ideological colors, by violations of the physical environment.

But let us recognize that civilization today is also menaced by "constant petty breaches of faith and minor complicities", by all those little dishonesties and deceits and thefts which we are learning to take for granted. When we choose to treat integrity as a luxury we are contributing to the decline and fall of our civilization.

Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa)

Touring Continentals will be here Aug. 12

A live 90-minute concert of contemporary Christian music will be presented at 8 p.m. Sunday Aug. 12 at Emmanuel Baptist Church, 2121 Cedar Hill Cross Road, by the internationally-known Continental Singers and Orchestra.

The group, on an annual summer tour, will perform contemporary gospel music, spirituals, anthems and hymn arrangements. The program Peace and Rejoice, will feature some of the great Christian songs currently heard around the world.

Medleys of favorite hymns and praise songs will be interspersed with contemporary gospel songs such as Don Francisco's He's Alive and great standards such as How Great Thou Art.

The 25 vocalists and 10-piece orchestra, selected by audition from thousands of high school and college young people from the U.S. and Canada, has toured abroad and this year will visit Russia for the first time.

Coffee will be served at the end of the service.

Faith, sharing days at UVic

Victoria's first Faith and Sharing Retreat will be held Aug. 26-31 at the University of Victoria. It will be sponsored by the Roman Catholic diocese.

Faith and sharing retreats started in 1968 when Dr. Jean Vanier, founder of L'Arche, an international community for handicapped adults, was asked to give a week-long retreat to a group of priests in Toronto.

Vanier agreed, but only under the condition that an invitation be extended also to lay people, to youth and the elderly, to the handicapped, and the poor.

It was from this initial gathering that the unique character of faith and sharing retreats developed, creating a movement that spread throughout Canada and the rest of the world.

The week-long retreat consists of daily talks, reflection and sharing in small groups, and times for prayer, solitude, and celebration.

This summer's retreat will be led by Wera Saether, founder of the L'Arche community in Oslo, Norway. Theme of the retreat is The Wounded Child, and Ms. Saether will be drawing on her experience living and working with severely handicapped children.

Fee for the retreat is $77, which includes all meals and overnight accommodations at the university. The retreat is open to all, Catholic and non-Catholic, and no one will be refused because of inability to pay the full fee. For registration or more information, write: Faith and Sharing, 740 View Street, Victoria.

THE NEXT WORLD CHAMPION?

By Guest Columnist
Sir Harry Golombek

Well, he won't be World Champion in 1981 since he was thought too young to play in the Soviet Zonal tournament at Lvov last year and so had no chance of qualifying for the Interzonals this year — but in 1984? Then indeed the 16-year-old school boy from Baku, Garry Kasparov, might well wrest the world title from whoever is the champion.

He celebrated his 16th birthday by beating the American Grandmaster Walter Browne in a strong international tournament at Banja Luka in Yugoslavia. In so doing, he produced a lovely combination that prompted the Yugoslav press to liken him to Bobby Fischer at that age. I think he is better combinationally than Bobby at that age but not perhaps with quite that classic command of strategy that distinguished both Fischer and Capablanca in the days of their youth.

So recent and so sudden have been Garry's explosive incursions into international chess that his name does not appear in the Ele rating list that was published in January of this year.

Yet, consider his results in the 46th USSR Championship that was held at Tbilisi in December 1978. This was a strong event in which 17 out of the 18 players were Grandmasters. The only non-titled player was Kasparov himself. One of the previous year's joint champions, A. Dorfman, finished next to bottom, the last place being occupied by that fine player N. Kuzmin. Yet Garry came in ninth, beating Lev Polujevsky, O. Beljavsky, Dorfman and Kuzmin.

In the Banja Luka tournament, he obtained a Grandmaster result and won first prize with two rounds yet to go. His score at that stage was 10½ and the nearest competitors to him were the three Grandmasters, Ulf Andersson, Tigran Petrosian and Jan Smejkal, who had 8 points each.

Here is the beautiful game Garry Kasparov won against Walter Browne at Banja Luka, 1979.

WHITE: Kasparov
BLACK: Browne

POSITION AFTER 19th move of Black: Kasparov-Browne. White: King on KN1; Queen on QB2; Rooks on QR1 and King 1; Knights on QR3 and KB3; Bishops on Q2 and KN2; Pawns: QR4, QN2; Q5, K4, KB2, KN3 and KR3 (15 pieces). Black: King on KN1; Queen on Q1; Rooks on QN1 and K1; Knights on Q2 and KB3; Bishops on QN2 and KB1; Pawns QR3, QN3, QB4; Q3, KB2, KN2 and KR2 (15 pieces).

20.	B-B3(a)	Q-B2
21.	N-Q2	B-B1(b)
22.	B-B1	P-KN4(c)
23.	N-B3	P-R3
24.	N-B4	P-N4
25.	PxP	PxP
26.	P-K5!	NxQP(d)
27.	NxQP	BxN
28.	PxB	Q-Q1
29.	N-K5	N-N5(e)
30.	Q-Q2	NxN
31.	RxN	RxR(f)
32.	BxR	N-B3
33.	Q-K3	NxB
34.	QxN	P-B5
35.	B-N2	B-K3(g)
36.	R-R7	P-N5
37.	B-K4	P-B6
38.	B-R7ch	KxB
39.	QxB	Resigns.

(a) The net result of Black's strategy is that White has established a very strong piece with his 20th move on the long diagonal.

(b) Black is reduced to tortuous moves like this and any attempts at disentangling his pieces merely react to White's advantage.

(c) Weakening himself badly on the white squares; a weakening for which he has to pay dearly later on. His best line now seems to be P-N3 followed by B-N2.

(d) After 26 . . . PxN; 27. PxN, RxR; 28. RxR, B-R3; 29. Q-B5, N-N3; 30. NxP, PxN; 31. QxPch, K-R2; 32. R-K7, White wins.

(e) Or 29 . . . NxB; 30. N-B6, RxR; 31. RxR, Q-B3; 32. R-K8ch, K-N2, 33. NxR, N-K4; 34. RxN, QxR; 35. QxN, and White wins.

(f) If 31 . . . B-K3; simply 32. PxP.

(g) Equally hopeless is 35 . . . B-N2; 36. R-R7, Q-N3; 37. RxB, RxR; 38. BxR, QxB; 39. Q-K8ch, K-N2; 40. P-Q7, etc.

* * *

The solution to the problem above is: 1. NxP, KxN; 2. P-R8=Q mate; or 1. NxP, RxNch; 2. BxR mate; or 1. NxP, RxN, 2. B-R3 mate, etc.

Alberta Socreds test new name

CALGARY (CP) Alberta's Social Credit party may become the Alberta Party at its convention in Calgary this fall, party vice-president Bill Downton said in an interview Thursday.

The name enjoys "a fair amount of support" among party members, Downton said.

It would indicate a party committed to private enterprise coupled with social action. In relations with the federal government, it would fall "somewhere in the middle" between the centralist Liberals and reactionary, anti-federalist Progressive Conservatives, Downton said.

The convention runs three days, starting Nov. 16. The proposed agenda calls for debate on a resolution to change the party's name on the first day.

Grain deliveries guessing game

WINNIPEG (CP) — The 1978-1979 crop year is over, but officials say it will be weeks before they know exactly how much grain was delivered under this year's quota and how much remains on Manitoba farms.

Preliminary estimates vary.

A spokesman for the Canadian wheat board said grain deliveries in the last couple of weeks have been so heavy it's impossible to come up with a realistic picture of the shortfall until at least the middle of August.

A spokesman for Cargill Grain Elevators predicted that when the dust settles, only five to eight per cent of the available Prairie grain quota will remain unfilled.

And while Ken Norell, information officer for Manitoba Pool Elevators, said any estimate of how much grain is undelivered would be a wild guess, he predicted a significant amount.

Teen trekkers paddle home

THE PAS, Man. (CP) — Seven Flin Flon, Man. teen-agers have just completed a month long, 12,000-kilometre canoe trek from Edmonton to The Pas to raise money for a hospital.

The seven paddlers were given a hero's welcome when they nosed their four canoes into the sand this week along the Saskatchewan River, near The Pas town hall.

The money they collect through pledges will go to the children's ward at the Flin Flon hospital.

"People told us how dangerous this trip was going to be," said 17-year-old Steve Ramsey, "but we didn't have any great problems at all."

They said the toughest section of the route was between the junction of the North Saskatchewan and South Saskatchewan rivers, where they shot 14 sets of rapids in one day.

Manitobans fleeing the coop

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitobans are leaving the province in increasing numbers, says a report by the Canadian Movers Association.

The report says there has been a 15 per cent rise within the last year in the number of Manitobans heading either east or west.

For about 56 per cent of those leaving, the destination was either Ontario or Alberta. British Columbia was next with 19 per cent.

Joe Capri of United Van Lines said Manitoba winters prompt some departures, particularly of people who retire to British Columbia.

CTV gets licence, orders

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission renewed Friday the licence of the CTV television network but said that the private network must increase considerably its Canadian programming.

The commission extended the network's licence to September, 1982, the same expiry date as the Crown-owned CBC.

Before that time the regulatory agency will look at the whole question of private and public broadcasting in Canada.

The commission also said that CTV must do more to reflect the cultural life of Quebec. And it said it wants more children's programming.

The commission also said that there will be a study group to look at the portrayal of women on television. It gave no details.

It said the network has been highly successful in this decade in improving information and sports' programming. It should be commended for the high quality of the news, public affairs and sports staff it has developed, the commission said.

"However, in the opinion of the commission, CTV has not yet in the main achieved comparable results with distinctive Canadian entertainment programming, particularly in the field of drama."

The network now must strengthen programming in this area and show much of it during the prime-time period after 8 p.m.

In the 1980-81 broadcasting year, the network must produce 26 hours of original new Canadian drama. That must be increased to 39 hours the following year.

The commission said it will not be enough for CTV to go into partnership with foreigners to produce shows. Canadian programming must involve domestic Canadian production.

In addition, the network must consider purchasing programs made by independent Canadian producers.

In fact, 50 per cent of pilots for Canadian programs must be entirely Canadian.

"The primary orientation should be on Canadian themes."

Alberta oil projects too much, too fast?

EDMONTON (CP) — There is concern among Alberta's business and labor leaders that two new massive oil extraction plants could overheat the province's economy if built at the same time.

The concerns came Friday in the wake of tentative approval being given by the Alberta energy resources conservation board to the $6-billion Cold Lake heavy oil project. Earlier this week, the board also gave tentative approval to the $5-billion Alsands oil sands project north of Fort McMurray.

"It would be best to stagger the two projects ove a couple of years," said Don Stanley, president of the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce. "Otherwise, it will put intense pressure on our labor force."

A mobile work force could handle an orderly succession of oil sands projects over the next 30 to 40 years, Stanley said.

Jack Dyck, of the Construction and General Workers Union local 92, said the projects would relieve unemployment among laborers.

"But it scares me to think of them going on at once," he said. "It could be a feast-or-famine situation."

Orderly development of oil resources mus be balanced with the urgency of Canada's oil supply, said Walter Dingle, president of the Alberta Chamber of Commerce.

"Canada will require 15 oil sands plants by the year 2000," he said. "We should have a new plant starting every 18 months."

Before final approval for the two projects is given. the Alberta cabinet will study the impact on the province's economy if they are built simultaneously. In earlier statements, members of the cabinet expressed preference for a staggered construction schedule.

It is estimated that the projects could pump more than $13 billion into Alberta's economy.

Meanwhile, planners in government departments covering health, education and social services say there is enough time to provide necessary facilities to meet boom demands.

The population in Cold Lake and surrounding communities is expected to rise from the current 19,600 to between 38,000 and 40,000 when the plant comes on stream, said Al Craig, director of the province's Cold Lake regional office.

Two-grilse limit set in N.B.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — In the face of an alarming drop in the number of Atlantic salmon returning to rivers in Eastern Canada this year, Federal Fisheries Minister James McGrath announced on Friday a new limit on sport salmon fishing in New Brunswick and Newfoundland.

McGrath said in a news release that the move is "only the beginning" of a large-scale program to save the Atlantic salmon, which experts say is in serious danger.

McGrath announced a two-grilse limit. Grilse are young salmon weighing less than six pounds.

Over the last few weeks McGrath has met with fisheries and natural resources ministers from New Brunswick, Newfoundland, Nova Scotia and Quebec.

Huskies maul B.C. toddler

MONTREAL (CP) — Using a goat and a cat hitched to a post as bait, three rifle-toting dog catchers have killed a 60-pound husky that mauled a 17-month-old girl in nearby Laval last week.

The husky shot Thursday was one of two that set upon Tanya DeFoy, a British Columbia girl who was playing in the driveway of a relative's home. The dogs, who did not have collars, bit her at least 16 times and — as one witness described it — shook her like a piece of meat.

Meanwhile, her playmates tried in vain to chase the dog away by throwing sticks and stones.

Then the girl's mother rushed out and grabbed her child, by then covered with blood, while neighbours beat down the dogs who still were trying to attack the child as her mother held her.

The child now is recovering at home in Chilliwack.

One husky, weighing 125 pounds, finally was subdued by the neighbors who were armed with clubs, while the other escaped into nearby corn fields. It was frequently sighted but managed to elude capture by hunting parties for more than a week.

"We worked day and night to find the dog," said Claude Rioux, who organized the hunt.

"We even hired young people to beat through the corn fields and the swamps beside them. But it was all in vain because the animal always got away from us."

It was Rioux's idea to lure the animal by tying up a goat and cat in a clearing near the corn field. He figured the odor of the goat and its bleating would bring the dog out of his hiding place.

The ploy worked after three hours and the animal was shot before it could sink its teeth into the prey.

The other husky was quarantined.

Loto Canada control shifting to provinces

FREDERICTON (CP) — Control of Loto Canada is expected to be signed over to the provinces by the end of this month, the chairman of the inter-provincial committee of ministers responsible for lotteries said Friday.

Fernand Dube, New Brunswick's finance minister, said the 10 provincial ministers agreed in Ottawa on Thursday to a formula for transfer of the national lottery to provincial from federal jurisdiction.

"We already have in place the $5-a-ticket provincial lottery which is looked after by the inter-provincial lottery corporation and five regional lottery commissions," Dube said in an interview.

"Our intention is to use the same format for the $10-a-ticket national lottery because it has worked well for the provincial lottery. It will prevent duplication of advertising and administration and set the record straight once and for all that this field (lotteries) belongs to the provinces."

"The sooner the provinces get control of Loto Canada the better and I'm optimistic we will be in a position to sign the documents before the end of this month," he said.

Dube said the provinces have agreed to expand support for fitness and amateur sport in Canada.

Federal ads funnel to agency

OTTAWA (CP) — A Toronto company has been appointed as the central clearing agency of all government advertising and market research.

In a new step the Progressive Conservative government has named Media Buying Services Ltd. "agency of management."

Perrin Beatty, junior minister who works under Treasury Board President Sinclair Stevens, and Services Minister Roch LaSalle said in a joint statement Friday the idea is to reduce over-all federal expenditures on advertising.

New Zealand—where time, beauty and space are plentiful

Lower costs major factor

Selling New Zealand 'easy'

By PETER TONGE

NEW YORK — Gowan Patton is a New Zealander who rises early every morning to run five or so miles through the streets of this or any other U.S. city or town he happens to be in.

Besides enjoying these early outings, he needs to keep in shape, he says, to get through a pretty rigorous schedule that allows few letups. His job: to sell New Zealand to Americans east of the Mississippi.

It's a rewarding task, says the travel commissioner from New Zealand, and one that is "getting easier all the time." There are several reasons for this: much lower air fares across the continental United States, somewhat lower air fares across the Pacific, the low-cost Kiwi dollar, and the fact that New Zealand remains one of the more inexpensive lands to be in.

Not many years ago, American visitors to the island nation were few and those that did make it were invariably from the West Coast. The Eastern or Midwestern American who made it all the way generally was both retired and rich.

The additional 3,000 miles across country, plus the cost was usually more than enough to scotch most travel plans to a land famous for grand and diverse scenery, lamb chops, its national rugby team and some remarkable performances (for so small a country) by its Olympic athletes. It was so much easier and cheaper to fly to Europe.

It still is a whole lot cheaper to travel to Europe. But it no longer is cheap to travel in Europe. By contrast, New Zealand is a bargain.

It will cost you and your spouse $42 to $52 a night for the two of you at the Auckland Intercontinental (one of the top hotels in the country) and you can get by on half that price at many other good hostelries. The train ride of 425 miles between Auckland and Wellington costs only $19.50. Most meals are inexpensive, too.

Not all that many years ago, Americans east of the Mississippi were rare visitors even to Hawaii. Then the advent of wide-body aircraft and lower fares took them there in droves, and it didn't take long for many to realize that New Zealand wasn't all that much farther on. In any event, of the 60,000 Americans who visited New Zealand last year, 40 per cent came from the East.

But why should anyone want to travel some 9,000 plus miles for a vacation anyway? Well, J. Hart-Rosedial, an American schoolteacher, said it better than the New Zealanders themselves.

Hart-Rosedial is listed in the Guinness Book of Records as the world's most travelled vacationer. At last count he had visited 353 different countries and of them all he named the land of the kiwi as No. 1 in his estimation. It is a combination, he said, of Norway and Switzerland, both of which he finds fascinating.

New Zealand has a quite remarkable range of scenic wonders, all concentrated in a country about the size of California.

In this moderately sized land mass, however, there are no more than 3 million people. So, if you can ignore the 60 million plus sheep, there is plenty of space for everyone. The pace is less hectic than in many other nations. As New Zealand promoters like to put it: "In a world where time and space is running out, there is still plenty of both in New Zealand."

New Zealand's Southern Alps are larger than all of Switzerland, and while the country's fjords are as beautiful and dramatic as those in Norway, they have something else to offer: Because of the warmer climate they are clothed in greenery from the base to the top. As in Yellowstone National Park, New Zealand has its thermal springs. Its Maori (Polynesian) culture is yet another attraction. Then there is the overall friendliness of the New Zealand people whether of Maori or European stock.

It is quite common for a New Zealander to invite a visitor he might meet in the street or at the supermarket into his home. The fact is, says Patton, that "because of our isolation, we're as interested in the visitor as he is in us." Noting this trend, tourism authorities have begun marketing tours on this "meet the New Zealander" theme.

Clare Bridge and College on the tranquil river Cam

Doing Cambridge in a day

By DAVID BUTWIN

CAMBRIDGE, ENGLAND — One of the more energetic (and informative) guides I've met in a decade of professional wandering is Isabel Bryant, who perhaps missed her calling. She might have won Great Britain an Olympic gold medal awhile back in the 5,000-meter walk.

Of course you don't do Cambridge in a day without hurrying. On her normal tours of the east counties — through Essex, Haymarket, the Fenland, the wool towns, or Cambridge itself — Mrs. Bryant slows her pace to a mere gambol. (Her address: Manor Cottage, Swaffham Prior, Cambridge.)

She led the way first over the Mathematical Bridge, so named because it was built, in 1749, on mathematical principles using no nails or bolts, just interlocking tangents of wood. Today you can spot bits of metal, for the little bridge was rebuilt on its original lines at the turn of the century.

There are 21 men's colleges, three for women, but all are at least partly co-ed. There are 11,000 regular students who are in session for three 8-week terms, beginning about Oct. 10, late January, and mid-April.

On we plowed through St. Catherine's College, to Corpus Christi with its roses and ivy and weathered Gothic walls, to King's with its cathedral-like chapel housing, behind the altar, Ruben's "Adoration of the Maji." We looked onto a vast emerald courtyard — by my hasty calculation the size of two football fields. An old man on a power mower putted across the velvety green — a chore, said Isabel, he performs three times a week.

At lunchtime we repaired, by car, to the Three Horseshoes in nearby Madingley, where one of the morning's mysteries was cleared up. Had I not heard a burr in Mrs. Bryant's voice? Indeed, she is a native Scot who has adopted Cambridge and its environs with enthusiasm.

On the road back to Camridge I indulged my World War interests at the American Military Cemetery, where 4,000 crosses and Stars of David mark the graves of American victims of World War II. On an 18-foot-high wall in the chapel is an enormous battle map, a work of art, really, with battle sites, planes, ships, and submarines deployed from Europe to the Pacific in metal sculpture.

Back in town, Mrs. Bryant waved to a man passing in a car. "That's Mr. Button — he was the Brain of Britain," she said, referring to a Cambridge friend who had won the annual countrywide radio quiz competition.

Setting a brisk afternoon pace, my leader took me through the backs — the shaded lawns behind the colleges that dip down to the River Cam, a place where sheep were installed only a few years ago to keep the grass mowed. We passed beneath rows of fragrant lime trees. The Cam was alive now with noisy, errant punters. That was when we decided to hire one.

There is not a more romantic ride north of Venice, and I think Isabel Bryant, hardly a newcomer to this mode, was moved herself.

"You know," she trilled, "I haven't been on a punt since my children, now grown, were very small."

There was much more to see by foot — the voluminous bookstore called Heffers; Trinity College with its Wren library — by all that could wait until this lovely moment of indolence was over.

Many famous sites close to London

Even it your stay is the British capital is short, you can still see thatched cottages and ancient pubs, castles, stately homes and gardens, medieval towns and cathedrals, Shakespeare's hometown or one of England's famed universities.

The easiest and most inexpensive way to do some or all of these things is by short train trips ranging from one-half to one and one-half hours which leave you plenty of time for sight-seeing before returning to your London hotel.

In any direction you choose, the train will pass through lush English countryside, towns and villages and arrive at a pleasant station only a short walk from your destination.

A few places within easy reach of London include:

ARUNDEL: A lovely town dominated by the magnificent castle of the dukes of Norfolk. From Victoria Station, 75 minute journey.

BATH: See the Roman Baths, medieval abbey and elegant 18th century buildings, From Paddington, 70 minutes.

BRIGHTON: Favorite seaside resort of the prince regent who built the spectacular Pavillion. Stroll through winding alleys full of small shops and antique stores. Traditional seaside amusements on the pier. From Victoria, 55 minutes.

CAMBRIDGE: Visit some of 23 medieval college buildings and don't miss the breathtaking Kings College Chapel. Stroll along the river Backs and gardens. From Liverpool Station, 68 minutes.

CANTERBURY: The magnificent cathedral where Thomas a Becket was murdered, medieval city walls and buildings, Roman ruins. From Victoria, 80 minutes.

HAMPTON COURT: Riverside palace of Henry VIII. Visit the royal apartments, wander the spacious gardens and test your skill in the famous Maze. From Waterloo, 34 minutes.

HASTINGS: The site of the 1066 battle where William the Conqueror won England, seaside resort amusements, picturesque Old Town and ruined castle. From Charing Cross, 90 minutes.

OXFORD: Visit the colleges with cool cloisters and riverside walks. From Paddington, 62 minutes.

WINDSOR: Royal castle towering over the River Thames. Visit state rooms, Queen Mary's Doll House. From Waterloo, 47 minutes.

There are also special escorted rail tours of one, two or three days. Among the many offered are: Stratford-on-Avon, Warwick Castle and Coventry, Salisbury Cathedral and Stonehenge, the Lake District, the walled City of York, or Longleat House, stately home and Safari Park.

For further information about day trips from London by rail or the longer escorted tours, write British Tourist Authority, 612 S. Flower St., Los Angeles, Calif. 90017.

The popular Irish pub, Durty Nelly's, lies in the shadow of Bunratty Castle

In Ireland pubs offer more than drinks

By J.H. SILVERMAN

DUBLIN — It is said that only two kinds of people know all the secrets in Ireland — priests and publicans.

The publican is more than a bartender. Part philosopher, part confidante, he presides over that noblest of institutions, the Irish pub, which plays a role somewhere between a way-station for the thirsty, a concert hall for the sentimental, and a club with minimal dues for the lonely.

In a country whose police stations still have lace curtains on the windows, and which as early as 1777 was publishing road maps locating some of the better watering spots, it should come as no surprise that pubs have a history and character of their own.

It was in Ballyvaughan that I gained my knowledge of pub lore from owner Cathal O'Loughlen. In this village of several hundred souls, O'Loughlen's is a grocery store, a gathering place for the townspeople, and a catalyst for natives and vistors. Cows wandered by its front door controlled, on that day, by a herdsman of ancient years on a bicycle.

At O'Loughlen's you will see remnants of the past when pubs had three sections serving the gentry, the public, and a "snug" or parlor where women or the local priest could slip in for a private Guinness. At the risk of arousing women's lib, resurrecting the "snug" could be one of Ireland's great contributions to contemporary drinking.

You pay for every round of drinks. It is also considered bad form to leave money on the bar. And if you like ice, remember that it is a recent innovation and must be requested, particularly in the country, since most drinks are served at room temperature.

Irish music and pubs are inseparable. To a North American schooled in Irish history by singing groups like the Dubliners, a pub such as O'Donoghue's off Dublin's St. Stephen's Green is pure Gaelic heaven. One of the most popular tourist spots in the Dublin area is the Abbey Tavern — half pub, half restaurant. The food is expensive by Irish standards, but the turf fire, ballads like "Red Haired Mary" and the story of "Young Roddy McCorley" are worth the price of admission.

Country pubs are more basic and one of the most famous is Durty Nelly's outside Shannon near Bunratty Castle. Despite the thousands of tourists who pour through the castle every year, mostly to take in the medieval banquets served up there, the pub has miraculously kept its charm and character.

Durty Nelly's comes alive at night. The music is purely homemade. A daytime visit gives one a feeling of pub life in days gone by, with soft spoken Irishmen alone with their "jars" of Guinness. No one knows the origin of the tavern's name, but any discussion will bring up at least four or five versions, and is the stuff from which Irish legends are made.

For the traveller who has the courage to stray from the beaten path, there are pubs so esoteric that to many Irishmen they are unknown. But could anyone forget a visit to the Highest pub in Ireland that perches on "the top of the Comb" in Kilgarvin! Here is time turned backward as Tadg Creedon, its owner, serves ale in a bar "so old my great grandfather couldn't remember when it opened." Creedon's amenities are few but the atmosphere creaks with the memory of bygone countrymen satisfying an eternal thirst after a long day with their herds in the rough rocky pastureland.

Country-house popularity growing

DUBLIN — A form of accommodation that is growing in popularity with visitors to Ireland is the Irish country house — usually a charming old-world home that embraces a blend of gracious living and age-old elegance with the quiet simplicity of rural Ireland.

The surroundings of these country houses provide opportunities for fishing, boating, tennis, golf and riding, and for the less energetic there are sandy beaches and the unspoiled Irish countryside to explore. The evenings are usually given over to ballad singing, traditional song and dance, storytelling around a peat fire, or a visit to the local pub.

For today's visitor, the country house offers a kind of life rarely found in the modern world. Guests share the home with host and hostess and meet many of the local people who help to make a stay in Ireland a warm experience.

For more information on Irish country houses, contact the Irish Tourist Board, 69 Yonge Street (Suite 706), Toronto M5E 1K3.

Hydro satisfied on gas needs

CALGARY (CP) — A British Columbia Hydro spokesman told the National Energy Board Friday that the Crown corporation is satisfied its natural gas requirements are being protected.

David Duff said Hydro's reason for intervening in the board's export hearings was to ensure that proposed natural gas exports do not cause shortages affecting its customers.

He said statements by the B.C. government and by Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., one of the export applicants, have satisfied Hydro's concern about future supplies for its customers.

Other and more general issues involved in export proposals, Duff said, are more properly the concern of the B.C. government.

Hydro's role in the hearings led to recent controversy in the B.C. legislature when opposition members accused the government of muzzling the Crown corporation's concern over gas supply.

In another statement Friday, a B.C. government representative at the hearing endorsed Westcoast's export plan.

K. C. Mackenzie of the attorney-general's department said the province has lost revenue and Westcoast's operating efficiency has been hampered because Northwest Pipeline Corp. of the United States has not been taking the full volumes available to it under previous export licences.

Mackenzie noted that Pacific Northwest markets have until recently had abundant supplies of low-priced fuel oil that competed with B.C. gas. But California needs large volumes of additional gas.

By approving licence extensions for Westcoast and allowing it to make sales through Northwest to El Paso Natural Gas Ltd., he said, the board would give Northwest impetus to open its markets and use B.C. gas to serve California. The extensions would permit export of up to 851 billion cubic feet more gas.

Mackenzie also urged the board to help persuade U.S. authorities to take more than current volumes of B.C. gas.

Earlier he presented deputy chairman R. J. Ludgate, of the B.C. Energy Commission, as a formal witness to give government endorsement of the proposed exports.

In reply to questions by Duff, Ludgate confirmed that B.C. government studies show the Westcoast exports would not leave the province short of gas and that the B.C. government has assured Hydro its customers will be protected in case of temporary shortages on peak-demand days.

Duff said those assurance satisfied two Hydro concerns.

Others, he said, were satisfied when Westcoast included possible 1983 use of gas on Vancouver Island in its demand forecasts and when it agreed to an export licence condition amending its contract with Northwest.

The condition, which would apply to a licence extension period beginning in late 1989, would reduce shipments to Northwest if necessary to meet B.C. needs on peak days.

Saanich considers racquet courts

A proposal to rezone a portion of the former Ste. Michelle winery building on Quadra for use as racquetball-squash recreation facility will be submitted to Saanich council for consideration.

Chief planner Gil Laurenson said there is a growing need in the municipality for such facilities.

Six racquetball and three squash courts are proposed in the plan, as well as a health food snack bar in the lounge area.

Local singers tops in talent

Two Victoria pop vocalists, Jackie Moffat, 6010 Old East Road, and Michael Watson, 1311 Burleith Crescent, have topped 30 other Victoria area contestants in a regional competition preliminary to the first annual Esso Talent Festival.

The two will be among 24 British Columbians to appear in the semi-finals at this year's Pacific National Exhibition. The competition will take place Aug.25. If the Victoria pair are among the eight finalists chosen they will compete before CBC television cameras for the first prize of $2,500.

A guest appearance on a regular CBC national TV variety show accompanies the cash award, as well as a special promotion package. Second prize in the talent search — the largest ever staged in B.C. — is $1,000, third is $500 and each runner-up will receive $200 together with copies of the musical arrangements prepared for them.

Both competitions will be staged in the Coliseum.

Only $17,000 says Bennett

RICHMOND (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett said Friday reports that the cost of recalling the British Columbia legislature for an emergency session would reach $100,000 are incorrect.

Bennett said $17,000 would be a more accurate estimate of what it cost to notify the province's 57 MLAs, to send planes to retrieve most of them and to run the legislature during the special sitting.

However, Controller-General L. G. Bonnell said before the special sitting that it costs about $60,000 a day to run the legislature during a session.

The emergency sitting was called to correct a government error which had put the Seaboard Life Insurance Co. out of business. Its licence was inadvertantly repealed when the Obsolete Statutes Repeal Act was passed during what was supposed to be the final session of the sitting Tuesday.

Bennett made his comments while visiting the B.C. Summer Games in the Vancouver suburb. He was to have attended opening ceremonies Thursday night, but was forced to return to Victoria to help correct his government's error.

$3M price tag on CBC station

VANCOUVER (CP) — Victoria's uncompleted television production centre may soon be up for grabs to anyone with $3 million to spare, says Len Lauk, CBC regional director.

"It's probably going to be sold; we're investigating the possibility of a sale," Lauk said. "We've had no offers, just inquiries from various people."

He said the inquiries were private, and declined to say who made them.

The proposed new station, scheduled for completion in November, 1979, at a cost of $9 million, was a casualty of the $71 million in cuts which the CBC had chopped from its 1979-80 spending budget because of federal spending restraints.

If it is sold, the money from the sale of the Crown-owned building would go to the treasury board, Lauk said. The CBC would act as the agent for the board.

Victorian glow over Paris

By BERNADINE MORRIS

PARIS (NYT) — The shape that Paris couturiers seem to have agreed upon for fall is the tightly fitted jacket with a small peplum flowing over the hips. With its puffed-top, leg o'mutton sleeves, it casts a Victorian glow over the current couture openings.

The big sleeves differentiate it from the New Look of Christian Dior which swept Paris and the world in 1947.

The New Look's shoulders were smaller and rounded, but its waistlines were similarly nipped. The full skirts that frequently accompany the peplum jacket today were a significant part of the Dior collection of more than 30 years ago.

In its current incarnation, with the big sleeves, the peplum jacket has turned up in most of the collections as the 24 scheduled openings reached the half-way mark.

Emanuel Ungaro, the sometime avant-gardist, opened his show with a peplum suit in wine-colored wool and reiterated the shape in broadtail, wool with a velvet skirt and chenille knitted in abstract patterns.

Coats were similarly designed as were the dresses shown under them. A black-and-white checked coat with the waistline considerably eased was one of the best styles in the collection.

Other jackets were longer with flatter tunics and were actually closer to the Dior archetype — except for those puffy shoulders.

They weren't the only shapes Ungaro had up his sleeve. He also paired the same kind of shoulder with a sort of zoot suit or, when shown in stripes, gangster suit. The jacket sloped from the broadened top to a low closing and fitted hipline. Under it there was frequently a beaded chiffon blouse.

The combination of puffed sleeves and slick shape seemed like an anomaly but it wasn't weirder than some of the other things going on in the couture.

For evening, Ungaro did his zoot suit in satin striped in rhinestones and added a fox scarf around the neck. Towering pleated head-dresses shaped like fans or tricky arrangements of hair curlers — the bride's resembled the onion domes of Russian churches — distracted from the evening clothes.

In the Lanvin show, the peplum jacket was paired mostly with full, flaring skirts, a style Jules-Francois Crahay frequently favors. Leg o' mutton sleeves accompanied waistlength boleros emblazoned with scroll appliques. Underneath them were vividly colored and very wearable silk blouses.

The more exotic aspects of the ballet company that captivated Paris before the First World War were represented by harem pants, brocade tunics, and most dramatically by incredibly vivid color combinations with an Oriental splendor.

A puffed-sleeve bolero in hot orange silk was bordered in pink, worn over a pink mamisole-top dress with a black satin underskirt, the whole thing punctuated by a jade scarf. Not what you'd call understated!

The talk tended to centre on fashion.

"There's a tremendous disparity here between what you see at the shows and what you get in the stores," said Rita Salzman, whose husband is ambassador to the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development here.

Childless couples seek self-fulfilment

FAMILY

TORONTO (CP) — Where have all the children gone in this International Year of the Child?

A graduate student in sociology at Queen's University in Kingston, Ont., has conducted some intensive research on the birth rate in Canada and has found that many more couples are choosing childless marriages for economic reasons and the desire for self-fulfilment.

Bill Halkiw said that in 1961 eight per cent of married women between 25 and 29 reported that they had chosen not to have children.

But by the 1971 census that figure rose to 15 per cent and Halkiw says the trend is likely to peak now at about 20 per cent.

Halkiw's statistics already take into account that an average five per cent of Canadian couples are naturally sterile.

Right now, with a fertility rate of 1.8 children a couple, Canada has less than zero natural population growth, although the population is increasing through immigration, Halkiw said.

At the present rate, couples are not replacing themselves in the general population and he said "children may be scarce in the future."

The 22-year-old student started to write a master's thesis on this topic after he noticed the general decline.

He wanted to find out why many young, well-educated couples with good incomes chose not to have children.

In an exploratory study, Halkiw interviewed 26 childless couples in Kingston.

He asked them about their education, employment status, income, career commitment and reason for not having children.

He found 40 per cent of the couples chose to be childless for what he calls self-actualization reasons — ambition, money, travel, personal fulfilment.

Thirty per cent gave economic reasons for not having children, saying that children are too expensive or they would lower the couple's standard of living.

One of Halkiw's interesting finds was that those in the $30,000-income bracket were as convinced they couldn't afford children as were couples with an income of $15,000 a year.

"A lot of people are out in the world to enjoy life; that's what I gathered from this sample."

Typical of this study was a teaching couple whose combined incomes were slightly more than $30,000 annually.

They wanted a condominium, two cars, Florida vacations in the winter and they achieved all that in their eight-year marriage.

Children never entered into their plan, Halkiw said.

His study is continuing through the summer.

He wants to find out whether there is a correlation between high income and childless marriages; whether childless marriages have any effect on the divorce rate; and why people marry if they don't want children.

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: In another advice column, I recently read, "I have written to Dear Abby a couple of times, but she never answers my letters."

I am a 30-year-old wife and mother who has read your column in the New York Post ever since I was a teenager. I've written to you NINE times, and received a prompt, helpful reply every time. (I still have the letters.) Maybe people don't know that unless they enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope there is no way you can answer them.

Please print this, Abby. It hurts me when people say you don't answer their letters. I want to add that I have written to several other advice columns, and the ONLY other advice columnist who answered my letters was Ann Landers.

— B. B. K.

DEAR B. B. K: Thanks, I needed that!

DEAR ABBY: My daughter-in-law smokes one cigarette after another. It's OK if she wants to ruin her own health, but she has children 9, 8 and 4 who are constantly exposed to her smoke.

Last Easter they drove to see us and, when I kissed the youngsters, their clothes and hair reeked of smoke. It makes me sick! My son doesn't smoke. I don't know how he stands it.

Besides that, the children are always in need of haircuts, their clothes are soiled and she never sees to it that they wash up before meals or going to bed.

How does a mother-in-law tactfully let it be known that her heart is broken when she sees her grandchildren raised this way?

— NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: Any suggestions you make to your son's wife will earn you a meddling mother-in-law medal.

If you're truly concerned over the apparent neglect of your grandchildren, talk to your son about it. The responsibility is half his.

DEAR ABBY: I have a lazy teen-age daughter who has to be reminded over and over again to write thank-you notes for gifts she receives at Christmas, her birthday and, more recently, for her high-school graduation.

Now she has a new cop-out. She thanks people for their gifts by telephone. Her grandparents live 1,500 miles away and so do most of her aunts and uncles, so the calls aren't exactly free. She says she will pay for the calls herself, but so far I haven't seen a penny.

Her father was furious when she told us she was planning to thank everyone for her graduation gifts by phone, but we both agreed it would be better than not thanking them at all.

Daughter argues that a phone call is much more personal and gives her a chance to ask how they are and to tell them what she is doing, how the family is, etc.

Do you think a telephoned thanks is proper?

— MOTHER OF A TEEN

DEAR MOTHER: A written thanks is better. But a phone call is better than no thanks at all.

DEAR ABBY: Is there any reasons for an 80-year-old woman with a living husband to be constantly talking about sex? It is very embarrassing for her family.

She complains that her husband is "too old" for her, and she hopes he dies before she does so she can get herself a peppier husband.

Is it normal — or even possible — for a woman her age to want sex? We are shocked. She was always such a proper person.

No names or location, please. Our family would have to leave town if this got out.

— ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANON: It is both normal and possible for a woman of 80 to want sex. However, if she has suddenly begun to talk about it constantly, it might indicate that some physiological changes may have occurred in her brain. Try a little tenderness.

Wood beats plastic for gerbils to chew

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: My gerbils get gerbil food, apples, lettuce, carrots, cabbage and water. The trouble is that they chew up the plastic houses I buy for them. What am I doing wrong? — D. M.

DEAR D. M.: Their diet's fine. The problem is that they need something very hard to chew on to keep their teeth in good condition. Wood, unpainted, and the kind without sap in it, is preferable to plastic for chewing purposes. They'll probably prefer it, too.

DEAR DR. MILLER: We have a male cat who never cried. Recently he's been crying often. Why did he change his mind? — S. F.

DEAR S. F.: I can't tell from here what has caused your cat to change his mind, but in case it could be something serious, he should be checked by his doctor soon to see if the mystery can be solved.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have a nice aquarium set-up. It's natural. No filters or stuff like that, but lots of beautiful plants and fish. The fish are doing beautifully, but now I'm getting a lot of green algae in the tank, so much so it's hard to see the fish.

I've heard that a kind of scavenger fish called a clown loach will get rid of the algae for me by eating it. I'm worried, though, that he might uproot some of my beautiful plants. I know that light makes the algae grow so fast. Could I clear up this green soup by just blocking off all the light for a few days? I could let a little light in for a few minutes so the fish could eat. Would that be better for my plants?— W. H.

DEAR W. H.: Could a clown loach distrub your plantings? Definitely.

If you don't want to lean on a loach for your algae cleanup campaign, light reduction will work. But don't darken your tank totally. The blackout bit would indeed stop algae growth and the rest of your plant growth as well. This sudden stoppage could have serious consequences, particularly for your fish. Not only would the oxygen supply in the water be drastically reduced without help from your plantings, but sudden dieoff of all the algae could further deplete the oxygen and possibly prove posionous as well.

It would be far safer to change your fishes' currently healthy environment slowly by simply reducing the amount of light to the point where it doesn't stimulate rapid algae growth. This can be done slowly without turning off desirable plant activity or upsetting the fish.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My first salamander got pretty sick when I stuck her in plain chlorinated water.

I don't make that mistake anymore but sometimes I need a supply of water and I don't have time to boil it and cool it or to let it age to get rid of that chlorine. Is distilled water safe to use for amphibians? — W. F.

DEAR W. F.: Yes.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Lucky dog — if it's true he won't get cavities. How come? — I. A.

DEAR I. A.: No guarantees, but it's true that most dogs don't get cavities. The dog's mouth is usually alkaline, and an acid mouth favors caries development. Further, there are fewer contact points between teeth in the dog, and these ar the areas where cavities are most likely to occur.

Traditional guernsey sweater patterned after wearer's job

By MAY E. MacLEAN

On my last trip to England I revisited my mother's home on the Channel Island of Guernsey, and I was pleasantly surprised to find that numerous women are again knitting the traditional guernseys during their spare time for profit.

The guernsey is a garment originally worn by farmers, fishermen and quarrymen, the pattern for which had never been written down until after the Second World War as only a few of the older women knew how to fashion the pullover.

It was the island's Women's Institute Handicraft Committee who first compiled and printed a pattern of the fisherman's guernsey and this event set in motion the revival of an almost lost cottage industry.

Despite the small size of the island — is it only 25 miles in area — designs vary from district to district and fishermen wear a different pattern to that worn by farmers and farm workers.

But the design most seen today is that worn by the fisherman. The knotted cast-on edge of the welt represents the knots of the fishing nets and the band at the armhole edge is said to denote the ripple of the sand on the beach. The main part of the pullover is done in plain circular knitting with eleven double pointed steel needles. The sleeves are also plain stocking-stitch. A good knitter I am told can complete a garment in two weeks.

Today these garments are being exported to many parts of the workd and it all started when a local ship chandler had requests from some of his yachting customers way back in 1956.

Some of the knitters are physicaly handicapped and their knitting skill gives them an interest and a feeling of independence. Next week I'll relate some of the interesting facts and history of the Channel Island's knitting past.

If your family is in need of pullovers for this coming fall season, now is the time to begin knitting them. Simple classic style with raglan armhole and a choice of short or long sleeves, round, V-shape neck or the high turtle collar. Sizes given are for size 6 through 16, chest or bust measurements of 24 to 36 inches. Knitted in stocking-stitch with a 4-ply fingering or synthetic yarn.

Insulated attic not cause of sweating

Hand around the house

By A. J. HAND

Q — In the fall of 1977 I had the attic of my concrete block house insulated with cellulose. Since then I have had a problem with moisture. The outside walls sweat, and some have turned black from mildew as high as two feet above the floor. This had never happened before. I have had a lot of experts and contractors out to look things over, but no two have the same solution.

Everybody agrees it is not the fault of the insulation, but nobody can say what the problem is. One blamed it on cracks in the block walls, so I had them filled and painted, but the problem remains. I can also feel drafts of air around the baseboards where the mildew is forming. — M.R.

A — I agree the insulation is not to blame. In fact, insulation in your walls would probably solve the problem since it would keep the interior surfaces of the walls warmer and thus less likely to condense water vapor.

Certainly those cold drafts have to be part of the cause. They are cooling the walls, and it is always cool surfaces that cause condensation. So you should look into the source of those drafts and plug it up. Even if this doesn't stop the condensation it will cut your heating costs.

A few months ago I had a similar letter from a family in Clinton, Iowa, who had severe sweating problems during the winter. Since that letter appeared in papers across the country, two readers have written to me with the same story.

Both, it turned out, had gas heat, and both had clogged chimneys. Fumes from the gas combustion were backing up into the house and condensing. So if you have gas heat, have the chimney checked for bird nests, leaves and so on. That's another possible cause of your trouble.

* * *

Q — I have been trying to patch my concrete porch steps, but can't get the patches to stick. They seem okay at first, but soon begin to crumble and lose their grip. What am I doing wrong? — C.F., River Head, N.Y.

A — As a guess, I'd say you are trying to make the patches with ordinary mortar or sand mix. Neither of these two products is much good for patching. When you use them in such small amounts they tend to dry out before they have time to cure fully.

You should do your patching with a special patching mix that contains some synthetic resins (usually acrylic or epoxy). These have better adhesion, and also set up fast, before they dry out. In fact, they set up so fast they can sometimes harden before you finish your work, especially in hot weather. So mix in small batches, and work fast.

To assure best adhesion, make sure the areas to be patched are clean. And if possible, undercut the damaged area with a hammer and cold chisel as shown in the sketch. This will help lock the patch in place.

Eating smaller meal eases hiatus hernia

YOUR HEALTH

by L. L. Coleman, MD

I have a hiatus hernia. Is it possible that this condition can disappear if I take special care of my diet and take extra vitamins? — Mr. J. J. I.

DEAR MR. I.:

No. A hiatus hernia, sometimes known as "diaphragmatic hernia," is an anatomical change that occurs at the junction of the esophagus and the stomach. The esophagus, or "food pipe," normally passes through an opening in the diaphragm, to enter the stomach.

Hiatus hernia is a common disorder that occurs especially in the elderly and in obese people. Then the hydrochloric acid, normally found in the stomach, finds its way into the lower end of the esophagus and produces the unpleasant sensation of heartburn and other distressing symptoms of "indigestion."

The anatomical change, once established, cannot be reversed. This does not mean that anyone who has this condition should reconcile himself to a life of discomfort. Treatment for the symptoms is directed to eating smaller quantities of food and at more frequent intervals.

Overloading the stomach with food at any meal can cause distress. Fried and highly seasoned and greasy foods should be avoided. Loss of weight, beneficial in all instances, is particularly important to people with this condition.

Going to bed directly after eating can increase the frequency and severity of the symptoms. The use of antacids before and after meals is helpful. Of course, this should be done only with the specific advice of the doctor, for many patients with hiatus hernia do not necessarily require this additional form of treatment.

Supplementary vitamins in sensible doses are of value, but in no way affect the condition once it is established.

From the day our baby was born six months ago, the tears run out of his right eye profusely. We now know that he has some trouble with his tear ducts. Our concern is could it possibly affect his vision? — Mrs. S. C.

DEAR MRS. C.:

Let me immediately assure you that vision cannot be affected by this annoying, but not serious, condition. A tiny duct, or opening, no larger than an ordinary pin, runs from the lower lid into the nose. This is known as the "naso-lachrymal duct."

Some children are born with a narrowing, or stricture of this duct. Tears do not easily flow through it, and therefore overflow onto the face.

Infection and inflammation can also be responsible for the narrowing of the duct. This happens frequently in adults, too. There are now excellent techniques by which the duct can be enlarged. In some instances, surgery is resorted to, in order to clear up the problem.

ACADEMIC ACHIEVERS

Six Grade XII students at St. Michaels University School recently wrote the rigorous U.S. College Board Advanced Placement examinations, often described as "the most stimulating educational experience between kindergarten and graduate work."

The exams measure whether, and how well, students are qualified to handle second year university courses. Candidates are graded from 1-5, scores indicating: 2 "poorly qualified"; 3 "qualified"; 4 "well qualified"; and 5 "extremely well qualified". None of the SMU candidates earned less than a sound 3.

ANTON BURES, son of Mrs. Barbara Bures, of Victoria, earned 5 in biology; 4 in physics (with calculus); 3 in chemistry, and 3 in physics (electricity and magnetism).

MARTIN DAVIS, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis G. Davis, of Victoria, rated 5 in chemistry and 5 in physics.

CLARENDE DUBY, of Calgary, earned 3 in biology.

JAMES ELLIS, son of Prof. and Mrs. Derek Ellis of Victoria, 5 in biology.

JULIAN MARSDEN, son of Dr. and Mrs. John Marsden, 4 in biology and 3 in chemistry.

WARREN YU, of Hong Kong, 4 in biology and 3 in chemistry.

There can be no better measure of a teacher's, or of a pupils' ability than the results of tough, competitive external examinations. Mr. Peter Gardiner, Mr. Melville Jones, and Mr. David Knapton, are to be warmly congratulated on these excellent results in biology, chemistry and physics.

Ripening onions like it dry

GARDENING

Jack Beastall

Is it time to bend over the tops of onions?

This question has been asked many times in the past week by home gardeners, and I suspect that some of those asking the question believe it to be a practice important to success with onions.

The bending over of onion leaves is only an emergency procedure used when the crop is liable to be spoiled by unsuitable weather at ripening time.

Some home gardeners have told me they understood the tops, or leaves, must be bent over to make the bulbs grow, not realizing that any damage to the foliage will cause the bulbs to cease growing.

There are 114 species of the genus Allium cultivated on this continent, some native from British Columbia to California, none of which have their tops bent to make the bulb grow. Most are ornamental plants grown for their beautiful heads of flowers, and for the dried seed heads which are used in winter flower arrangements.

Only Allium cepa, known as onions, which is grown in fields and gardens as a food crop, has been treated in this manner. Where did the idea originate and why?

We find the answer in an old seed catalogue of Sutton & Sons (England) a bound volume published before the turn of the century, with instructions for growing Sutton Seeds in English possessions all over the world.

It states: "To ensure perfect ripening of the onion bulb in the British Isles and throughout Western Europe it is customary to arrest growth by bending over the tops, breaking the fibres in such a way as to limit, or stop, the supply of food.

"This is only necessary in climates subject to frequent summer rain; in the drier summer climate of other parts of the world the same result is obtained by withholding all water when the bulbs have made their full growth."

As far as our local gardens are concerned they definitely classify as being "in the drier summer climate of other parts of the world" where the bending of onion tops is not necessary.

The natural ripening period for onions here is from the middle to end of July, usually a warm rainless period.

Onion bulbs do not start to ripen until they reach full size for the variety being grown, which can be anywhere from one inch in diameter to five inches.

Maturing time for onions ranges from 90 days (3 months) to 120 days (4 months) so that seed sown outdoors in late April may not produce full size bulbs until somewhere in August.

To obtain bulbs ready to ripen in July a seed bed is prepared in September and the seed sown thickly around the end of October or early November, depending on weather and soil conditions. The seedlings are transplanted to a well-prepared bed in late March.

As soon as the bulbs reach full size for the variety, no more water must reach the shallow roots, either from rain, artificial watering of the bed, or soil water reaching the bed from adjacent crops, flower borders, or lawns.

The onion belongs in the Lily Family and the bulb is composed of scales, not overlapped like the lily bulb, but in a continuous layer around the bulb.

The outer scales begin to harden as the bulb reaches full size. If the roots find water, new growth will start. The pressure of this growth from the centre outwards ruptures the partly hardened scales and causes the bumps and bulges of deformed bulbs.

At the same time, new leaves push their way through the top of the bulb and result in an oversize neck, or a "bull-neck" bulb.

Both these conditions must be avoided if the bulbs are to mature and ripen naturally and store for winter use. Bulbs with bull-necks and bulges rarely store beyond October.

More important than bending over the tops is to make sure onions are planted where the soil will be dry at ripening time, whether at the peak period in July or later.

If water is reaching the roots as the bulbs size up, immediate action is needed.

The most common practice here is to push the bulbs to one side to break half the roots, and to repeat the push on the other side a day or so later, leaving the bulbs on the soil for a week to thoroughly dry. If the roots do not break easily they are cut each side with a small spade.

Another factor is sizing up and ripening is the position of bulb in relation to the soil in which it is growing.

When seedlings are transplated only the roots are placed in the soil and the seedling held upright by pressing a little soil around its base. As soon as the roots have spread sufficiently to anchor the plant, all soil is pulled away from the bulb so that it makes its growth on top of the soil like a golfball or tennis ball.

When the seed is sown outdoors in rows, the soil is scraped away from the base of the plants to expose the small bulbs when the foliage has reached a height of six to eight inches.

One reader asks in a letter: "Why is it we beginners receive so much conflicting advice on growing vegetables?"

Confusing it may seem at first, but in Canada we must remember that cultural practices have been brought by immigrants from the British Isles, Europe, Asia, India, Africa and Australasia. All these practices are valid under certain conditions, and we can use many of them profitably once we understand the basic requirements of the plants we are growing.

Week's work

This month collect seaweed and other composting materials. Look for sacks of barnyard (cow) manure for sale.

Sow seed of parsley and chervil for winter saladings; can be grown in balcony tubs, too.

Cut off canes from raspberry and other cane fruits as soon as last fruits picked. This encourages better new growth for wintering. Also give good watering.

$100,000 aids Asia camps

British Columbia and Yukon branches of the Canadian Red Cross have raised slightly more than $100,000 to support Southeast Asian refugee camps.

Victoria branch executive director Peter Hinton said today the B.C. campaign is part of a national campaign to raise at least $500,000 for the camps. He said the campaign has nothing to do with the resettlement of Vietnamese boat people in Canada.

"These funds are for Southeast Asian camps, where we are caring for about 350,000 people, and have been since 1975," said Hinton.

The Red Cross is operating the camps on behalf of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees.

"These camps are the first refuge for these people," said Hinton. "It's where the first needs exists."

A $50,000 grant from the provincial government almost doubled the more than $50,000 already raised in the province from private citizens, including $19,500 that has already found its way into the Victoria branch office at 1046 Fort.

Hinton said all the money raised for the refugee camps is spent on the refugees.

"There are no administrative costs," he said.

The money will be used to provide food, clothes, shelter and medical supplies.

THE NAME GAME RULES AND PROCEDURES

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print you name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.

Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.

2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as the letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, but may only be used once in any one entry.

3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.

4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.

5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in The Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.

6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.

7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.

8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.

9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to The Name Game will be final.

To be an innovator. That is a prime key to acceptance on a universal scale. It is not the only one. Others are necessary, as in some safe-keeping devices where a series of keys are needed to obtain the objective.

Innovation is the master key. Sustained quality, persistence and, naturally, money, are the others.

Accepting that as a realistic appraisal, the Victoria International Festival, currently attracting the city's biggest and most enthusiastic summer audiences, is 50 per cent along the road to recognition as possibly the most exciting festival of music in North America and among the best internationally.

It is unquestionably superb in quality. And, thanks entirely to the genius of its founder-director, J.J. Johannesen, it is in all of North America a major innovator.

One of the rarities is to be seen in programs devoted exclusively to the most magnificent works for keyboard performed by not one, but several exemplary pianists. And a "first" for Victoria and anywhere else, is the five-concert series of Concerti Extravaganza concerts with several soloists on different instruments performing works from the vast concerti literature.

But a most important innovation is yet to come when Opera Piccola concludes the festival in its sixth week with two performances at the McPherson.

"Opera Piccola" is Johannesen's choice for a form that is frequently referred to as "chamber" opera, a title he feels is likely to frighten away some potential audience. Piccola simply means "little" — remember the piccolo, the tiny relative of the flute?

Composers, from the earliest appearance of the opera form to the present time, have produced works in the piccola or chamber genre. They are usually a single act, playing time about an hour or less, and most are comedies. Introducing this form to the International Festival in the summer of '78 was totally in keeping with the festival character, which lays emphasis on chamber and solo performance.

But there is more to it than that. With assistance from the Canada Council Touring Office and B.C. Cultural Fund grants, last summer's Opera Piccola productions of Pergolesi's La Serva Padrona and Arthur Benjamin's La Prima Donna, were performed and warmly received in schools and communities around the province under the aegis of Johannesen's Vancouver-based Festival Concert Society.

This summer's forthcoming productions of Rossini's La Cambriale di Matrimonio and William Walton's The Bear will also tour B.C. in the fall and winter. But what is even more significant is the very real possibility that the operas will be seen well beyond the boundaries of B.C. — live, not televised. Such as at the Place des Arts in Montreal.

When the International Festival begins to create exports of this quality it has already arrived on the national stage. The world stage is a fingertip touch away and the last key, funding for travel and publicity, may not be that much further.

As last year, the opera productions are in the gifted and experienced hands of Pierette Alarie as artistic and stage director, and her husband Leopold Simoneau, voice coach. Both were major international opera stars and recording artists in the late 40s and 50s.

ALARIE

The attractive couple now make their home in San Francisco, where both are involved in operatic directing and coaching, but Alarie says they will remain Canadians always — "We don't think of ourselves as Quebecers or French Canadians," she says; "just Canadians."

She is enthusiastic about the form she is working in at the Shawnigan Summer School of the Arts opera centre. (Memo for all who are confused by that title: "Shawnigan" is the place where it all started. The Shawnigan Summer School for the last six years has been located in Victoria on the campus of St.Michaels University School on Richmond Road.)

Alarie says she will never run out of good material no matter how long Opera Piccola survives. She feels the star of chamber opera is rising.

"It's only reasonable to turn to it now that production of large operas is becoming so astronomically expensive," she comments. "In Albie, the provincial town in France where Toulouse-Lautrec was born, there is now a yearly festival devoted to chamber opera."

La Cambriale di Matrimonio (The Marriage Contract), written by Rossini at the age of 18, will be sung in English. While Alarie confesses that she doesn't approve of translations — "the metre of the poetry when translated no longer is quite comfortable with the music" — she considers that translation is essential when it comes to comedy.

The hero of The Marriage Contract is, oddly enough, a Canadian. Apparently, according to Madame Alarie, there was much talk of Canada in the Europe of Rossini's youth. It was regarded as a remote and therefore exotic place.

The opera is set in England. It concerns two merchants, one English, the other Canadian, and the Englishman's daughter who is destined to marry the Canadian. "It has a perfectly lovely overture and delightful music all through. There are some easily recongnizable themes from the later Barber of Seville," she says, adding that Leopold (Simoneau) is responsible for the translation.

English tenor Peter Pears, after reading Anton Chekhov's play, The Bear, suggested it to composer Walton as the basis for an opera. Chekhov wrote the piece as a vaudeville sketch and in Walton's treatment it becomes a lively parody with hints of Trovatore and Offenbach and even some French songs and typical Russian music worked in.

Before Opera Piccola 79 is even launched Madame Alarie is looking eagerly forward to next year and years after that.

"With so much to explore there's never an end to the challenge and the fascination," she says. "One day soon I would like to do a short Canadian opera."

She has much praise for the co-operation she has received from Bastion Theatre in the area of costuming and Tom Taggart's stage design.

Opera Piccola's two productions will be seen Aug. 21 and 22 at McPherson Playhouse. They will be accompanied by a portion of the Victoria Symphony Summer Festival Orchestra.

Pianist makes debut

Announcement of an introductory recital by pianist Gilbert Munroe is made jointly this weekend by the Victoria Conservatory of Music and the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Munroe, until recently founder-director of the successful Conservatory of Music in Medicine Hat, joins the Conservatory's senior piano faculty in September. He will perform works by Beethoven, Chopin, Liszt and Charles Griffes at the recital, which will take place Aug. 12 at 3 p.m. at the Art Gallery, 1040 Moss.

Born in Winnipeg, Munroe received an intensive musical education there, gaining both ARCT and LRSM diplomas as well as degrees of B.A., B Mus. and M.Ed. Two scholarship years followed at the Royal Acadmey of Music in London where he studied under Harold Craxton.

While continuing to concertize, Munroe began an 11-year career in education as music specialist and program developer in Manitoba. As a Canada Council award winner in 1970, he took a Master of Music degree in performance at the University of Alberta.

Admission to the recital is by donation to the Victoria Conservatory of Music scholarship-bursary fund. Early arrival is advised by the Art Gallery, as seating will be very limited for this intimate event.

'Fables, Fools, Fantasy'

Several of Grimm's folk tales under the title Fables, Fools and Fantasy will be presented in story-theatre style by University of Victoria's Senior Secondary Summer Theatre Workshop. The production will be seen at the Phoenix Theatre starting Wednesday and running through Aug. 16, with no show Aug. 12.

This year the Workshop attracted 35 students from across the province to its six weeks of classes in acting movement, voice, lighting and set construction, and the full-scale production of the story theatre.

The production retains the original narrative form of the folk tales and enriches them with the theatrical devices of action, sound, light and music.

The tales have been adapted by UVic theatre professor Jim Leard, who is also the director. Music is by composer and UVic student David Boyce. Leard and Boyce worked on last summer's highly successful workshop production of Brecht's The Good Woman of Setzuan.

Fable will be performed nightly at 8 p.m. with a matinee Aug. 11 at 2 p.m. The Phoenix Theatre box-office opens Monday and reservations may be made by calling 477-4821.

Toasts her death

MILTON MALSOR, England (CP) — Grandmother Christine Farman hates to miss out on a good time, so she hired the village hall and threw her own champagne funeral "while I'm still around to enjoy it."

Horsing around at Arena

Chief Bear Paw is an Appaloosa with a hankering for champagne. He is also a member of the Royal Lipizzan Stallions show which comes to Memorial Arena Tuesday. During the show Chief Bear Paw is honored with a hilarious birthday party during the course of which he is thrown by his owner and rider, Gaylord Maynard. The Chief has a bit too much to drink and proceeds to get into all sorts of ridiculous situations. The act is perhaps the highlight of the variety portion of the Royal Lipizzan show and may be one of the funniest acts of its kind to be seen anywhere today. Maynard is the fourth generation of Maynards to perform as circus acrobats. He followed the family tradition but eight years ago took a fancy to horses. He found Chief Bear Paw as a young colt and trained him for this unique comedy act. Maynard also has a beautiful American Saddlebred horse and a white Arabian with which his 18-year-old daughter Leslie performs in the Royal Lipizzans. Apart from the comedy, the elegance and beauty of these great horses, along with their fantastic leaps, makes the show an exciting spectacle.

Black humor film winner

Black humor underlines the film Howard in Particular, which won first prize in the scenario category of the Canadian National Exhibition Film Competition in Toronto. The 14-minute short by Victoria film-maker Atom Egoyan is based on the retirement of a minor employee from a company so large that it finds normal retirement parties impractical.

Instead the retiree is led to a small room where he listens to the president of the company on a tape-recorder. The president informs him that even though he may be the 96th employee celebrating retirement that day, he, the president, has always held "a certain interest" in him.

The black humor emerges as the retiree is unable to escape from using a standardized imagery even in the nightmares he has while listening to the tape. Thus visual cliche is used as a metaphor for depicting the imagination that the employee has lost through years of brainwashing.

The last scenes of the film show the totally passive figure that the retiring man has become, both in his actions and in his thoughts.

Egoyan, currently working in Toronto directing his own production company, will begin shooting a longer film in September from an original script he is now finishing. Born in Cairo in 1960 of Armenian background, Egoyan has lived in Victoria since 1962 when his family immigrated to Canada.

Howard in Particular is currently being distributed by Canadian Filmmaker's Distribution Centre in Toronto. However, the film is now being shown with the new Marcello Mastroianni feature, Wifemistress, at the Quadra Theatre.

Choir concert

A concert of sacred music will be presented at St.John's Anglican Church, 1611 Quadra, Friday at 8 p.m. by the touring Montana Chorale.

The Chorale is a 24-voice adult ensemble which was organized in 1976 as part of the U.S. bicentennial celebration. Its specific purpose at that time was to present the works of Montana composers in the John F. Kennedy Centre for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C.

Following a sucessful debut, the ensemble has continued to give concerts as a touring choir. A wide variety of music is included in the Chorale's presentation. Main emphasis is the performance of the finest choral music from the world's leading composers, but Montana composers are still not neglected in their repertoire.

Conductor is Dr.Kenyard E. Smith, director of choral studies at the Univeristy of Wisconsin. He is much sought after in North America and Europe as a clinician and vocal coach. He is founding conductor of the Montana Chorale, which is accompanied by Dennis Alexander, chairman of the piano faculty at the University of Montana.

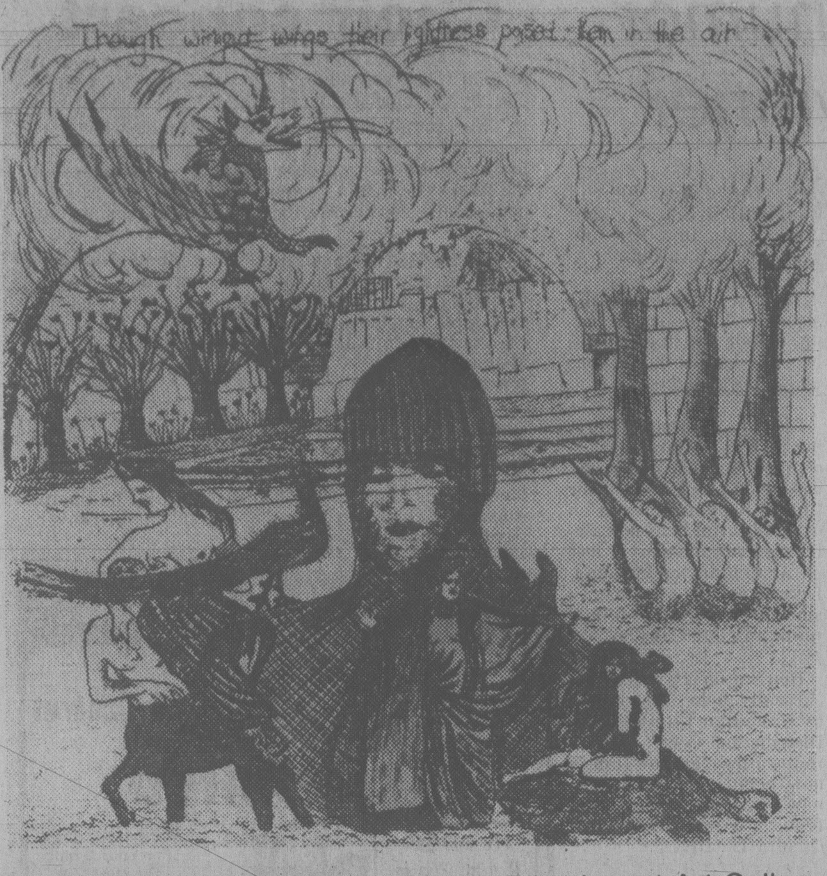
'A world of fantasy' in etchings



Hand-colored etching by Alexandra Dikeakos at Art Gallery

By AUDREY JOHNSON

The diversity of expression possible to individual points of view within one graphic medium is intriguingly portrayed in two current exhibitions at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria. Both artists are women and both are working in the print medium, specifically etching, with a number of lithographs being included by one artist.

Alexandra Dikeakos has created a dream-world with her exquisitely hand-colored etchings, a world of fantasy, lyrical imagination and delicate symbolism. Far removed from this visionary milieu is Jean Maddison's world — Life in the City.

Maddison has a view of her world that is spare and astute, but singular in its symbolism while projecting a subtle infusion of sardonic humor. Inevitablty most viewers will feel more attracted to one than the other. It is difficult not to be influenced by personal taste when confronted with such disparate images and techniques.

The opportunity to view the two artists' works side by side, however, presents a rather unique occasion for pondering the individuality of expression that is the essence of the creative process. In point of fact, the multitudinous differences in viewpoint and the incredible versatility artists have called upon through the ages to present their views and visions is an important clue to the permanence of art.

How boring life would be if everyone saw it through the same lens, in the same colors, and without the dimensions and magnifications provided by the power of imagination.

The etchings of Dikeakos, delicately balanced compositions, luminous in the tender transparency of color applied by hand, and poetic in their imagery, derive their inspiration from small moments in literature.

Sentences arrested in midflight — "lulled by the rhythm of water . . . "But you and I will always fall together . . . " provide the impulse and title for her highly original, frequently allegorical concepts. Recollections of childhood appear, glimpses of classical metaphor, scraps of dream sequences and mythology.

Perhaps my fascination with these etchings derives from a taste for understatement, for the sensitive purity of line and the subtle balances to be found in them. And for the fact that in them I find an echo — and in some a clear visual parallel — to a most exquisite Japanese poetic idiom, the Haiku.

Jean Maddison's monochromatic etchings and lithographs on the city theme could not be more directly opposite. All 30 prints are concerned with variations on one theme; a compartmentalized box in which there is no movement but only a sense of rigid inescapable order.

The boxes' relationship to the spare angularity of modern city architecture is obvious. They are presented in the isometric perspective architects use to demonstrate spatial organization, varying in that organization only in differing depths and the rectangular or square form of the divisions.

The non-literal, totally objective viewpoint of city life they present is one of bleakness, invoking an almost frightening sense of monotony and isolation from the essential human spirit.

An exhibition of fine examples of Plains Indians art and artifacts has just gone on view at Art Mosaic Gallery, 910 Government (Harbour Square). Brought together from collections across Canada are beaded gauntlets and moccasins and a quill tipi bag of the Sioux, boot moccasins of the Kiowa, a carved antler handle quirt and peace pipe from the Plains, leather beaded war shirt, war clubs, leggings, knife sheaths and many other items. A few will be for sale.

The exhibition will last through Aug.18. Viewing hours are 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. daily, 9:30 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Friday, and 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday.

New arrivals for festival

Three important arrivals on the Victoria International Festival scene for its last three weeks are the Philadelphia String Quartet, the Duo Geminiani, and America's foremost oboist, Bert Lucarelli.

The Philadelphia was one of the highlights of last year's Festival and will undoubtedly receive a warm welcome at its first appearance this year at McPherson Playhouse Sunday. The ensemble will be playing Beethoven's Quartet in F minor.

Tonight's concert, the second of three Keyboard Opulence events at the University Centre Auditorium, has some treats in store, including the combination of breathtaking pianist Ruth Laredo with the superb pianist from the French trio, Jacques Rouvier, in a Schubert Fantasia for four hands. Also appearing will be Bela Siki, a long-time favorite with Victoria Symphony audiences, Joseph Bloch, Harmon Lewis and Robin McCabe.

On the Sunday program, a quintet formed by festival artists Robert Aitken, flute, Jean-Jacques Kantorow, violin, Nobuko Imai and Eberhardt Klemmstein, violas, and Barry Gold, cello, will play the Quintet Op.51 in D Major by Kuhlau. Also, the Pacific Wind Quintet will perform Quintet Op. 79 by August Klughardt.

A contrast will be provided when the first vocal music to be heard in the festival interrupts the instrumental flow. A quartet consisting of soprano, mezzo, tenor and bass will perform Schumann's Spanische Liebeslieder.

An all-baroque program on Tuesday includes the Duo Geminiani — Philadelphia first violin Stanley Ritchie with Elizabeth Wright at the harpsichord — playing Bach, and the duo of Garry Karr, bass, and Harmon Lewis, harpsichord, with works to be announced. Pianist Robin McCabe will play Ravel's Gaspard de la Nuit.

Thursday at St.Michael's the concert will feature the Philadelphia Quartet performing the Shostakovich No.4 and University of Victoria Faculty Ensemble in contemporary Canadian works.

Tokyo, Hanoi rift healing

TOKYO (AP) — Japan will soon begin talks with Vietnam on resumption of economic aid to the Hanoi government, a foreign ministry official said.

After pledging $64.5 million in loans and grants last December, Japan suspended aid six months ago to protest against Vietnam's invasion of Cambodia last winter and its policy that has resulted in the flight of hundreds of thousands of refugees.

Today's Music

By Leonard Feather

The jazz-classics link

Claude Bolling, who wrote the music for California Suite, is so French that at the end of an interview with him you want to stand up, salute and sing a chorus of La Marseillaise.

The Maurice Chevalier accent is there, along with the tendency, when English fails him, to lapse into a phrase in his native tongue. Yet this Cannes-born, Nice-and-Paris-trained composer and pianist, who made his professional debut as a teenager playing for the American Armed Forces in Nice, has devoted almost all his career to the art of American jazz.

Ironically, his reason for being in the United States at present is related less to his jazz associations than to what is being billed as "the classical-jazz connection." This weekend he joins forces with the renowned classical and jazz flutist Hubert Laws for a Hollywood Bowl concert that includes his Suite for Flute and Jazz Piano, another suite introducing classical guitarist Angel Romero, and excerpts from the California Suite score.

For many jazz musicians, an involvement with the classical world simply means a return to the scene of their first musical experience. Bolling, however, insists: "I'm not a classical musician at all. This whole thing happend by accident. I met Jean-Pierre Rampal, the great French flutist, because we had friends in common, and he said, 'Oh I would like you to write me something, because I love jazz but don't play it. Write for me something classical and you play jazz behind me.'

"I said 'Why not?' No, that isn't true, I said 'Bien sur!' Rampal is a great man and I never imagined to have an opportunity in my life to write for such a person."

Bolling tried out one or two movements, elicited Rampal's approval, and thereupon completed Suite for Flute and Jazz Piano, the recording of which was released in the U.S. in late 1975. Its success opened up a new area not only for Bolling but for Rampal, who last year shared the Hollywood Bowl stage in concert with Hubert Laws.

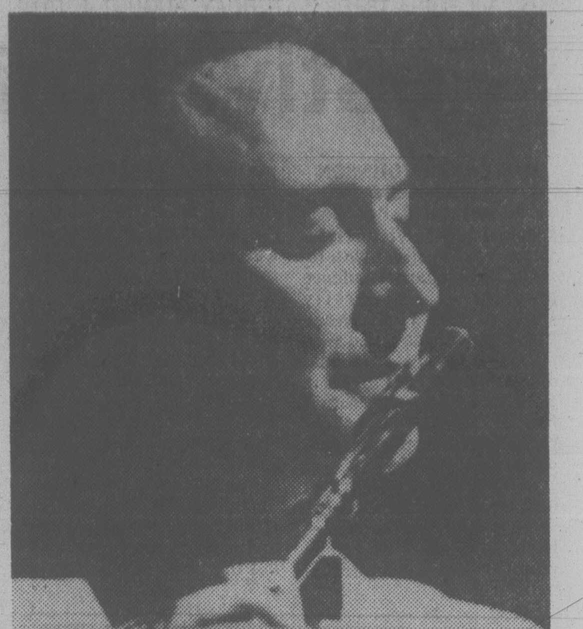
"Rampal and I were not trying to prove anything; this was not supposed to be a Third Stream composition," Bolling says. "I have to write in neo-classical form, with very little experience as a classical musician. On the other hand, Rampal has no feeling for improvisation in the jazz sense; he does not need this. Some little ornamentations he can do well, but he is not like Hubert, who is a full classical musician and also a jazzman. Young musicians have this facility more and more nowadays."

The Suite made enough of a splash on this side of the Atlantic to catch the attention of director Herbert Ross. "He wanted the same kind of musical mood for his film, and probably with Rampal. We were supposed to record it in Paris, but the Musicians' Union there didn't want that because the film was 100 per cent American; so that's how I came to meet Hubert and all the other fine musicians on the California Suite sound track: Bud Shank, Tommy Tedesco, Shelly Manne, Chuck Domanico."

The flute-piano work has had a slightly checkered career. Two years ago Bolling and Rampal played it at the Berklee College of Music in Boston, later at Carnegie Hall. "The reaction at Carnegie was mixed; the public of Rampal was not expecting this kind of music. But we also played it very successfully at a New York nightclub, the Bottom Line."

Asked whether he found it easy to persuade the jazz audiences to appreciate a classical work, or vice versa, Bolling said: "Here it is generally no problem. In France, as Rampal has said, it is terrible; many people are so conservative. If we should play this suite at the Theatre des Champs Elysees, they would shout and complain. We did it with good reaction only in two or three small festivals in the French countryside, where the crowds were younger and more broadminded."

For all their success, Bolling's classical capers cannot take precedence over his activities in jazz, swing music and writing for the screen. His credits include 40 movie scores, mostly in France, numerous television writing chores, and a wild melange of albums: boogie woogie piano, stride piano, and four LPs as leader and composer-arranger for his Show Biz Band, an Ellington-and-Basie inspired group.



Los Angeles Times

Jean-Pierre Rampal . . . 'a great man'

"Actually my first love was Dixieland and swing. I recorded in Paris with visiting Americans: Mezz Mezzrow, Roy Eldridge, Rex Stewart, Sidney Bechet, Bill Coleman, Lionel Hampton, Kenny Clarke, Cat Anderson."

"After my Dixieland phase I was fascinated by the music of Duke Ellington, and when I had a possibility to lead a big band, I wrote in that tradition. My main piano influences are Ellington, Art Tatum, Earl Hines; also Teddy Wilson, Scott Joplin, Jelly Roll, Fats, and James P. Johnson."

"Any new ones? Younger men?"

"No time to follow all that is happening."

Following his early jazz years, Bolling in the 1950s and '60s concentrated on studio work, writing or conducting for Sacha Distel, Juliette Greco, Charles Trenet, Henri Salvador, Brigitte Bardot and Liza Minnelli.

His chance encounter with the classical world has been carried through onto a series of records. In addition to the Rampal venture, he has recorded with Pinchas Zuckerman, the violinist, and with Alexandre Lagoya, the guitarist. A suite he wrote and performed with the latter is included in the Hollywood Bowl program, with Angel Romero, Spanish-born but U.S.-raised, in the guitar role.

If Bolling were your typical imported composer, he might be expected to use California Suite and the Hollywood Bowl publicity to smooth the way for a new life as a part of the American scene. On this present visit he has brought his wife and two sons with him, but for purely vacationing reasons. He has no intention of following up his advantages here.

"I now have so many writing commissions in France that even if I stopped playing entirely, I would still have enough work to keep me busy for ten years. I am writing pieces on commission for classiial trumpet, for cello, for chamber orchestra. In fact, I even have my work with me; I'm writing between rehearsals.

"I have also plans for writing films for very important French directors. Film writing is my main activity, so now I travel as little as possible."

Does he still have time to play jazz piano? "I must if I have to . . . how you say . . . keep my chops."

In the course of the conversation, Bolling casually let it drop that while working on California Suite he had to fly back to France for one day, play a gig in Toulouse with his Show Biz Band, then hurry back to Hollywood.

If Bolling had a theme song, it could well be the Josephine Baker favorite: J'ai Deux Amous." At present, neither of his two loves seems to be in any danger of obliteration.

Album of the week: Cat Anderson — "Cat Speaks" (Classic Jazz 142). Two frequent Bolling associates, trumpeter Anderson and drummer Sam Woodyard (both Ellington alumni) are heard in this Paris session, along with saxophonist-clarinetist Gerard Badini, who often has recorded with Bolling; the Dukish pianist Raymond Fol, and bassist Michel Gaudry. Happy, unpretentious mainstream jazz, with Cat growling and screaming on his horn, humming and scatting in a vocal cut. Except for Fol's "Cat In G Flat," the seven themes are by Johnny Hodges, Ellington or Anderson.

Festival mid-point reached

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

Mid-way point has been reached in the Victoria International Festival with tonight's Keyboard Opulence concert at University Centre. The first three weeks have been filled with stirring moments; emotional and intellectual highlights in an over-all experience that has been, with only slight exceptions, of top-level standard.

In fact, one could travel half way around the world as some among our audiences have, and only rarely encounter musical performance of substantially greater quality than the best that has been offered here.

Special and memorable among this week's programs, for example, was the tonally rich, emotionally intense yet sensitive performance by violinist Yuri Mazurkevich, of that passionate Sarasate working of gypsy airs, Zigeurnerweisen. The violinist's interpretation strongly invoked the gypsy spirit while avoiding any suggestion of cafe rhetoric. Technically it shone with a vitality and precision of bow and a suppleness of fingering that was wholly admirable.

This is an outstanding Canadian artist whom one could wish to hear with greater frequency.

His piano partner was that exceptional performer, Mitchell Andrews, a superlative artist whose unique chameleon-like gift is his ability to combine his keyboard mastery and broad musical intelligence to form satisfying partnerships with all other artists. His presence this year's festival has been invaluable.

Robin McCabe's depth and discernment, her exceptional sensitivity and interpretive power, has been much in view this summer and rewardingly so. A favorite of several past festivals, the pianist has clearly broadened technically but has balanced this increase in virtuosity with an intensifying of her ability to express her musical ideas and emotions.

A precise and gleaming technique, lovely tonal color and dramatic effectiveness marked her performance, this week, of Liszt's Les Jeux d'eau and Rigoletto Paraphrase.

Many music lovers had looked forward to the Brahms Horn Trio, and performers Barry Tuckwell, Ruth Laredo and Daniel Heifetz did not disappoint them. Tuckwell was at his supreme best in this rich work and the ensemble, while not achieving quite an ideal balance, nevertheless provided a fine well-detailed and musically secure performance.

Some extremely interesting and worthwhile Canadian music was played Thursday at the St.Michaels concert by University of Victoria faculty ensembles. Violinist Paul Kling with violist Jaroslav Karlovsky and cellist Hana Dedecius performed an Eckhardt-Grammate composition, Triolino. This was a closely knit ensemble performance of an attractive work.

Not so easy of comprehension on first hearing, but clever, original and interesting in its treatment of the various instruments, was a work by UVic School of head, Rudolf Komorous, entitled About Scales.

On a continuous pattern of sound from the vibraphone, played by percussionist Scott Eddlemon, were superimposed solo strands of flute (Lanny Pollet), horn (Dick Ely), violin (Kling), viola (Karlovsky), cello (Dedecius) and piano (Kathleen Solose). The whole was skillfully conducted by George Corwin.

Most in Saanich favor curbside refuse collection

Saanich should switch to a less costly refuse collection system and use the savings to reduce property tax, according to a private consulting firm hired by the municipality.

R&K Consulting says the majority of 9993 households surveyed indicated they favor curbside garbage collection over the present backyard service.

Almost 93 per cent of those surveyed indicated they own their own homes. The survey did not include apartment dwellers, who pay for private garbage collection.

Those surveyed overwhelmingly stated they would like to see the extra money used to lower property taxes.

Other suggested uses for the money were: decrease municipal debt, pave streets, construct more sidewalks, expand recreational facilities, upgrade parks, extend bicycle paths and increase fire and police service.

However, in answer to a question asking where more savings could be affected, much the same list was repeated. Reductions in recreational expenditures and fire and police services were near the top of that list.

The survey showed that the most popular way to cut costs would be a reduction in municipal staff and general administrative expenses.

On the basis of the findings, the firm is recommending a move toward curbside collection.

Residents who want backyard collection continued should pay an extra fee attached to their property tax bill, the report suggests.

That kind of alternative would operate along the same lines as a paper route — collectors would have a list of names and addresses where backyard collection is to be made.

The alternative is suggested because a large minority favor backyard pickup as their first choice and "implicitly prefer to pay additional tax money for the service notwithstanding the majority preference for more economical refuse collection."

As they actually start paying for a service their neighbors are willing to do without, the number of residents who want backyard service will diminish, the report predicts.

It also recommends the physically handicapped, senior citizens and other residents who will find it difficult to take their garbage to the street be entitled to backyard collection without paying the extra fee.

The consultants suggested that next year's tax notice should explain public service costs and benefits — including adinistrative overhead and council salaries — so the public will understand them.

Any discretionary funds not applied to reducing property taxes should be used first for road improvement, sidewalks, bicycle paths and streetlighting. Next on the list would be increased police services, then improved parks and recreation.

Shop centres defined

Saanich and the Capital Region District have come up with a definition of regional shopping centres — without help from Victoria, Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier said Thursday.

Couvelier said Victoria refused to take part in the shopping centre debate.

He said he has been told the city's failure to get involved is somehow connected with internal squabbling among aldermen eyeing the mayor's chair.

City council can prove the rumor untrue by approving the new definition as soon as possible, he said.

Couvelier wouldn't give details of the definition, developed by Saanich and CRD planners, before aldermen have a chance to look at it Tuesday.

He did say it separates regional shopping centres into two types and that the new definition make it unlikely the CRD will take Saanich to court.

The CRD told Saanich last week it will proceed with a move to quash the Tillicum shopping centre project — unless the municipality agreed before Aug. 6 to halt approval of Broadmead Farm's application for a 229,000 square foot shopping centre until regional shopping centres had been defined in the regional plan.

Weddings

Barnes — Graham

A pretty wedding of wide interest to friends and relatives was held at 11:00 a.m. on June 16th in the garden of 595 Monterey Ave., Victoria, when the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Umstead Graham, Paula Jane, became the bride of Brian John Barnes, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Howard Barnes of 112 Linden Ave., Victoria. The Reverend Clare Holmes officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride, lovely in a gown of white shadow crepe, which was designed and made by her mother, wore orange blossoms in her hair and carried a bouquet of pink baby roses, orange blossoms and baby's breath, all gathered from the summer garden and fashioned by Miss Joy Spencer, a dear friend and neighbour of the bride and her parents, who happily undertook all the floral arrangements for the occasion.

The bride's attendants were her close friends, Miss Marie Irwin, Maid of Honour and Miss Trudy Verkley, Bridesmaid. They wore identical gowns of mauve and blue silk border print with matching shawls trimmed with lace. They carried baskets of summer flowers in pastel tones to match their gowns. The grooms attendants were Cole Kirby and Ray Cunliffe.

A reception followed with a buffet luncheon served under a colorful blue and white marquee and the sun shone all afternoon on a happy garden scene. A beautiful and touching toast to the bride was given by Mr. Norman Anderson, a long time friend of the family, to which the groom happily responded.

A SEAFRONT LOT

With a good view, well treed, a level lot for building and just a few steps down to the fascinating shell and shale beach formations. Located five minutes' stroll from the Island's favoured swimming beach. This is a lot where you can "do your own thing" over a period of time — create a summer place or future retirement home. A place where a family do-it-yourself project can build a sound investment.

ARTIST OR WRITER

Will appreciate this Eagle's Eyrie — a 400 sq. ft. cottage perched on the most commanding view site on Piers Island. Yes! It has a western exposure and you can see the sun set behind Mt. Taum on Salt Spring, breathtaking seaviews up Satellite Channel of Cherry Point and Cowichan Bay. The combined living room-kitchen area features a natural field-stone fireplace and stainless steel sink. Electric heating. Separate bedroom and three-piece bathroom. A wrap-around patio to appreciate the 180 deg. view. On one of the island's largest lots a winding path approaches the cottage through cool glades lush with fern and shaded by tall timber. The agile will use the existing rugged path to the good beach below while the more sedate will use nearby accesses or improve the path down to a more acceptable standard. All-in-all, a unique retreat — at only $48,500.

SOUTHEAST EXPOSURE

Convenient to the Piers Island dock — this spacious family cottage of some 1,200 square feet is in a setting of juniper, fir and arbutus.
A sheltered 35' deck traps the sun all day and early evening and the 180 deg. view is centered on Canoe Pass and other Gulf Islands.
The house would be practical for summer or year' round use and is electrically heated and has a large Acorn free-standing fireplace in the A-shaped living room with a cheery stove in the family room. Sliding glass doors open on to patios front and rear. Lino floors for easy summer upkeep. Large enclosed porch area for storage, deep freeze, workshop, etc.
There are two conventional bedrooms and the third is a loft area in the A-frame portion with magnificent view. Four-piece bathroom, electric HW tank, fully furnished ready to turn the key in the lock and move in and start living. Price $64,500.

MAGNIFICENT 180 DEG. VIEW

Of the passing parade of Yachts, Coastal Shipping and Ferries. This eight-year-old cottage is nicely furnished, has three bedrooms, sliding glass door onto a large patio and free-standing fireplace. Just a few steps below the patio is a shell and shale beach. The cottage is electrically heated. Gross taxes $392.78. Full Price $66,500.

Tory conflict rules stiffer

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Clark has set strict conflict-of-interest guides for his cabinet and senior staff to ensure that they do not profit financially from their positions.

The guides, which are tighter than those set by former prime minister Pierre Trudeau for his cabinet, were sent to ministers Friday, along with a letter from Prime Minister Clark, an aide said.

Clark told ministers they must "conserve and enhance public trust and confidence in government" and "must not take advantage or appear to take advantage" of their positions or confidential information.

The guides, to be made public next Tuesday, force ministers to sell all publicly traded shares and speculative investments or place them in a blind trust, over which they have no control, within 120 days of entering the cabinet.

Frozen trusts, an option available to Trudeau cabinet ministers — whereby the minister retained the shares but could not sell them — have been ruled out.

In addition, Clark's ministers are prohibited from practicing a profession, managing a business, accepting directorships of companies or serving in a union or professional association.

The guides do not have the force of law, but a government spokesman said "it's a condition of employment. If you want to be in the cabinet, you follow the rules."

The government has promised to introduce legislation to force all MPs and Senators to disclose their financial interests before Christmas.

Government House Leader Walter Baker has said this is a high priority and the bill will be more far-reaching than a similar Liberal government bill which died when Parliament was dissolved for an election.

The Progressive Conservative bill would prohibit parliamentarians from having personal financial interests which could influence, or appear to influence their public duties and responsibilities.

They would also be prohibited from using, or passing on to someone else confidential information which could be used for financial gain.

Executive assistants to ministers have been prohibited from owning tradable shares in a public company since Lester Pearson was prime minister. Trudeau issued his guides for ministers in 1973.

Ottawa controls RCMP

EDMONTON (CP) — Ottawa, not the provincial government, has authority and control over the RCMP, Justice T. H. Miller, of the Alberta Court of Queen's Bench, decided Friday.

In a precedent-setting decision, Justice Miller ruled Alberta's Law Enforcement Appeal Board has no authority to hear a complaint lodged against the RCMP.

Several sections of the provincial Police Act were also declared inoperative because they attempt to impose on the RCMP commanding officer in Alberta reporting duties to the Alberta attorney-general.

The decision will be appealed, provincial officials said.

The test case, which led to two days of constitutional argument before Justice Miller, arose from a September, 1976, incident near Pigeon Lake, about 50 kilometres south of Edmonton.

In that incident a young driver was body-searched by two RCMP officers looking for drugs, of which none were found. The youth complained he was forced to stand naked and submit to an intimate search before friends of both sexes.

He complained to the attorney-general but was referred to the RCMP assistant commissioner in charge of the province, who replied that an internal investigation had found the complaint unjustified, adding he could appeal the findings to the Law Enforcement Appeal Board.

The youth appealed, but as the board began its investigation, Edmonton lawyer Michael Stevens-Guille, acting for the two Mounties, sought a prohibition order against the board. It was granted Friday by Justice Miller.

More than an accessory...

This fall, serious dressing calls for something a little softer under your suit jacket. The key look for this fall is a soft-tailored suit blouse — shirts just don't look right. Blouses have become such an important part of a total look, they're more than just accessories. Look at Reflections newest suit blouse. It's made with careful attention to detail. Detail usually reserved for the "bigger pieces." A carefully tucked front yoke. A gently modified shawl collar. In a more subdued palette of colors—eggshell and grey. Have a look at our important blouses. You'll see why they're more than an accessory. 30.00

Toronto listing a break for BCRIC

Shares in the British Columbia Resources Investment Corp. (BCRIC) will be listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange sometime next week — a breakthrough that could boost the value of the shares sooner than expected.

Trading in shares of the former provincial Crown corporation will begin Tuesday on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Corporation president David Helliwell said Friday the company will be listed on the Toronto exchange by Wednesday or Thursday.

The move to put BCRIC on the board at Toronto has been in the works for about a month, but the final decision was made Thursday when the exchange and Ontario Securities Commission agreed to waive some of the rules that normally must be met before a stock can be listed.

For example, the company has been allowed to issue its annual reports in the form of newspaer advertisements rather than follow the normal procedure of mailing out reports.

Helliwell said he doubts the Toronto listing would see an immediate rise in the value of corporation shares, but that the wider market exposure would attract more investors from outside B.C., making the price rise more quickly than it might ordinarily.

Almost all of BCRIC's two million shareholders are B.C. residents who picked up five free shares when Premier Bill Bennett decided to dismantle the Crown-owned investment company set up by the previous New Democratic Party government.

Eligible residents of the province also had the option of buying up to 5,000 shares at a set price of $6 a share. The giveaway and sale program resulted in one of the largest stock subscriptions in Canadian financial history — 96,250,000 shares were issued and the company raised $487 million.

Helliwell said the move to list BCRIC at Toronto was in the best interests of shareholders by stabilizing the value of shares.

"It would be a pity if a technical imbalance of buyers and sellers drives the stock below what it was actually worth," he said.

Vancouver-based stockbrokers, however, are less than enchanted with the move.

"This is taking business away from B.C. people by putting it in Toronto," complained Bob Fay of Continental Carlisle Douglas Ltd., who estimated that 90 per cent of the dealing in BCRIC shares will eventually shift east.

"In this case I think that switch will be very quick."

BCRIC trading will be watched intently by a somewhat skeptical investment community, bankers and provincial government ministers.

Another interested observer will be the federal Progressive Conservative government which has advocated returning some Crown corporations to the private sector.

Few, however, are likely to be watching more closely than the corporation's two million shareholders — many of them first-time investors.

But if the price of BCRIC shares goes down, as inevitably it will at some point, don't panic, says Vancouver Stock Exchange president Robert Scott.

"The shares have nowhere to go but up," he said in an interview.

"I hope people will realize that all shares go up and down and they won't panic if the price falls on Tuesday."

Gulf seeking picket curbs

Times News Services

VANCOUVER — Gulf Oil Canada has applied for a court injunction to restrict picketing and stop harassment by striking workers who allegedly attacked delivery trucks driven by supervisory personnel trying to leave the firm's distribution centre.

Gulf spokesman Roy Carson said Friday a B.C. Supreme court judge was expected to decide today whether to issue an injunction restricting the number of union members allowed to picket the Burnaby centre to a "reasonable number" and order a stop to "any harassment or violence which threatens the safety of our employees."

Carson said the individuals threw rocks at four trucks Friday morning, breaking windows. They also spiked tires and tampered with brake and air hoses, he said.

"You name it, they did it," said Carson.

Bill Lewis, a business agent for the Teamsters, denied that union members were responsible for the attack.

"It wasn't us that did it and we're not going to be blamed for it.

The Teamsters union struck Gulf Oil's Port Moody refinery and major distribution plants throughout British Columbia Tuesday, and expanded their strike Thursday to include Chevron and Imperial.

A run of deliveries by oil company supervisors rescued service stations running short of gasoline.

A score of gas stations, mainly in the greater Vancouver area, were forced to shut Thursday and Friday after supplies ran dry because of a strike by delivery drivers at three major oil companies. Stations elsewhere in the province were in better shape, but many had doubted they would make it through the weekend unless more gasoline came through.

Spokesmen for Gulf Canada Ltd., Imperial Oil Ltd. and Chevron Ltd. said a run of deliveries went smoothly Friday night. Some stations may be short of certain types of gas, but there should be enough to go around unless panic buying begins, they said.

B.C. Ferries Corp., which warned that its service to Vancouver Island might have to be curtailed if diesel oil deliveries were halted by the drivers' strike, reported that all ferries were making their usual runs today and no problems were expected during the weekend beyond the usual crush of holiday traffic.

A spokesman for the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers union has said however that union members won't cross a Teamster's picket line.

Teamsters' spokesman Bill Lewis has said the union will "picket wherever we're legally entitled to picket."

Lusaka summit goes into private

LUSAKA (UPC) — The constant wail of police sirens has ceased on the streets of Lusaka for this weekend for the first time since the Commonwealth conference began while the leaders of 39 delegations take a break from their comings and goings.

The leaders hope to emerge Monday from their two-day sojourn for informal talks at State House, the home of Zambian president Kenneth Kaunda, with the main elements of the final communique to be issued Wednesday already hammered out.

Meanwhile they relax in an atmosphere of swimming, golfing and horseback riding safely removed from the pressures of newsmen and advisors.

Among the Canadian delegation, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald has flown for a sightseeing trip to Victoria Falls on the Zambia-Rhodesia border, one of the great beauty spots of the African continent.

The leaders went into seclusion today with high hopes of finding a middle of the road program for genuine majority rule in Rhodesia following accommodations on both sides at formal sessions Friday.

Tanzanian president Julius Nyerere, spokesman for the five black-ruled states that border racially-troubled southern Africa, has said he has no objections to constitutional guarantees of parliamentary seats for Rhodesia's white minority. He agreed the Patriotic Front should halt its guerrilla war against the Muzorewa-Smith government in exchange for internationally-supervised elections.

British prime minister Margaret Thatcher, for her part, has agreed that elements of the new Rhodesian constitution drawn up by the former white Smith government are unjust and promised to honor commitments to provide for full black majority rule.

The relaxed hopeful atmosphere that marked the end of the week's talks was a far cry from the hostility and tension in which the conference opened. From the moment Mrs. Thatcher arrived in Lusaka to be mobbed by angry Zambian reporters, it was clear the black nations were outraged at suggestions Britain might lift economic sanctions against Rhodesia when they come up for renewal in parliament this November.

Mrs. Thatcher has softened her position since arriving in Lusaka, and much of the credit is being given to Australian prime minister Malcolm Fraser, who has aligned himself closely with the Third World position and reportedly urged Mrs. Thatcher to ease her stand.

Volcano threatens village

CATANIA, Sicily (UPI) — The Mount Etna volcano unleashed its awesome power in a major eruption today, covering eastern Sicily with a mantle of black ash and threatening a village on its slopes with a massive flow of molten lava.

The eruption, Etna's first in 17 months and its most spectacular in decades, showered ash, cinders and rocks over the eastern coastal city of Catania for the first time in 20 years.

Glowing red lava gushed from one of three craters down the rocky sides of the 10,707-foot high volcano and moved to within a mile of the village of Milo on the mountain's southeast slopes.

The village mayor immediately asked Milo's 2,000 residents to be ready for possible evacuation.

Etna eruptions have killed an estimated 1 million people during the volcano's 2,400 years of recorded history, but only one person has been reported killed by eruptions this century.

Catania's Fontanarossa airport was closed to traffic because the falling ash made its runways too slippery for landings and threatened to damage jet engines.

Residents of the city and nearby towns along the eastern coast donned heavy coats and carried open umbrellas to ward off the falling soot and cinders which covered the streets and blackened the beaches.

Tens of thousands of tourists stayed up through the night to watch the display.

Sounds like a cool idea for the heat

By CLAUDE ADAMS
FP News Service

WASHINGTON — Americans trying to take the sweat out of the energy crisis are shedding ties at work, buying sandals and installing those romantic Casablanca-type overhead fans that kept Bogey cool in the Moroccan heat.

There is life after air-conditioning, many are discovering. And a federal law prohibiting thermostat settings below 78 degrees F doesn't have to mean the end of comfort.

For the whimsical, a New York firm, Syntonic Research Inc., has developed an idea based on the premise that heat and humidity may be a state of mind.

For $7.98, Syntonic will sell you recordings of a "country thunderstorm" and an "alpine blizzard" that are designed to put a little chill in your life while the mercury is rising. The blizzard record, for example, features the slapping sound of sleet, winds rising and falling, and shutters banging.

The body may still sweat, but the mind is off somewhere in the Alps with Heidi.

The company's president, Irv Teibel, says the fake weather worked for a group of soldiers in Arizona, who switched off the humidifiers in their barracks and put on some 33 1/3-rpm rain and snow, and enjoyed their first good sleep in memory.

Stereophonic climate won't solve the energy crisis alone, but it might help. Air conditioners gobble up between 1,000 and 3,000 watts, while stereos set on low volume consume as little as five watts.

Even if it doesn't work, a recording of a gale-force wind is at least as good as most Muzak.

Fish shutdown?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A shutdown in the British Columbia fishing industry appears to hang on voting today by 4,000 shore workers.

Six hundred tendermen, also represented by the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, were also voting Friday and today.

Union president Jack Nichol said it was less likely that the shoreworkers would accept the latest industry offer.

Air crash in India

NEW DELHI (AP) — An Indian Airlines plane with 51 persons aboard crashed today near Bombay, United News of India reported. There was no word on casualties.

The news agency said the plane, on a flight to Bombay from Poon, went down near the village of Kiroli, about 50 kilometres from Bombay in southwest India.

Other details were not available.

'Mafia' tribe Papua's hit men

By ROBERT MUSEL

LONDON (UPI) — Sociologists are fascinated by a comparatively primitive tribe in New Guinea with a crime organization somewhat resembling the Mafia.

The tribe is the Goilala which has transferred its aptitude for murder from the harsh mountains of newly independent Papua New Guinea, off the northeast coast of Australia, to the capital, Port Moresby.

The Goilalas have become so important a factor in Port Moresby crime that they virtually support their tribal economy in the mountains with planeloads of city loot.

Lack of education prevents the Goilalas from corrupting the police and taking over businesses. "Both may, however, simply be matters of time," said a report in the magazine, New Society.

The Goilalas are an inbred group notorious for their implacability. When the first white patrols entered New Guinea's mountains at the turn of the century, the Goilalas met them with a shower of arrows and spears. The Goilalas kept fighting until the late 1930s, many years after other tribes had accepted colonial authority.

According to New Society, the Goilalas, a striking people with dark, brooding, big-boned faces, always exacted an eye for an eye in tribal disputes and killed for pleasure.

A Goilala male proved his manhood by killing "in the same way that a young Mafia recruit must make his bones before taking a senior position in the family."

"Even today there are recorded instances of young Goilalas queuing by a freshly killed body and taking turns to hack at it with an axe," New Society said.

Patrol officers broke the murder spiral in the tribal homelands in the 1950s using the Goilalas' own weapons — torture, arson, assault, destruction of homes and gardens and abuse of womenfolk.

The first Goilalas to reach Port Moresby in the 1950s discovered that murder in the back streets was easier than in the open highlands, where the patrols could ex-
